Nazis Massing Troops on Yugoslav Frontier As 1,200,000 Slavs Move Into Battle Stations; Allis Strike a Fraud, OPM Retorts to Murray

Defense Heads Say Moral Force Backs Order To Reopen Plant

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

An appeal to patriotism and loyalty, "which should be far more compelling to American citizens than any peremptory order," was proclaimed last night by OPM Director Knudsen and Navy Secretary Knox as a formula to effect reopening of the strike-bound Allis-Chalmers plant in Milwaukee.

Their statement, a denial to a sharply worded charge earlier in the day by C. I. O. President Philip Murray that they were issuing "ultimatums" without authority, took on added weight because of the "test-case" character of the strike, and was seen as an expression of the defense program's philosophy for the maintenance of labor peace.

Plant to Reopen

Quick reaction to their appeal came, meanwhile, in a company announcement that it would reopen the plant, holding $45,000,000 of defense contracts, at 8 a. m. today. The union, which had planned not to meet until tomorrow, was called to assemble at 6:30 a. m. today to decide whether to return to work, a step taken by many to indicate intent to resume work.

In vigorous language, Knudsen and Knox telegraphed Murray that their request on Wednesday to reopen the plant was made "after the fact was established" that the strike vote which closed operations 65 days ago was a colossal ballot-stuffing fraud, and that to continue the strike under these conditions was "unreasonable."

Handwriting experts had brought out at a State Employment Relations Board hearing that 2,200 of the pro-strike ballots cast in a union election were fraudulent.

The telegram climaxed a day of determined action in Washington to come to grips with the defense strike problem. Most important prior development was the certification by Secretary of Labor Perkins of four major defense strikes, including the increasingly violent International Harvester dispute, to the new National Defense Mediation Board, "opened for business" two days ago.

Other Disputes Referred

There were also indications that the defense program's largest and most threatening dispute at the Bethlehem plant of the Bethlehem Steel Co. would be certified to the board today unless pending conferences took a sharply improved turn.

Besides the International Harvester strike, called January 17 and involving more than 24,000 workers at four Midwestern plants, the disputes referred to the NDLB were:

The Condenser Corporation of America strike, begun March 10 at South Plainfield, N. J., affecting 2,200 men.

The Vanadium Corporation of America strike, at Bridgeville, Pa., where 225 workers have been idle since March 10.

The Universal Cyclops strike, also at Bridgeville, called on Jan-

'Boss' Away, Democrats Call Off $100 Feast

He'll Broadcast To Those Who Paid, Not To See, but to Hear Him

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Washington's "$100-a-plate" Jackson Day dinner, high point in the Democratic Party's annual Nationwide celebrations, was unceremoniously postponed last night.

Arrangements were hastily canceled after President Roosevelt found it impossible to return for the dinner Saturday night, and decided to address Jackson Day celebrants by radio.

R. J. Reynolds, treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, said the dinner would "have to be postponed" as 1,000 persons accepted invitations in the expectation that Mr. Roosevelt would appear.

Man's Measles Keep 4 Batteries In Quarantine

Post Staff Correspondent

Fort George G. Meade, Md., March 27.—Battery G, 176th Field Artillery, has been having a lot of luck, but it's all bad.

Two weeks ago a man in Battery G came down with mumps, so the battery was quarantined. Battery G shared its quarters with Service Battery, First Battalion, and its mess hall with Battery A, and they went into quarantine as well. Service Battery ate with Headquarters Battery, First Battalion, bringing to four the number of batteries quarantined because of one man's mumps.

Today a man in Battery G showed up with measles and the cycle was started all over again.

Rep. Sumners Suggests Death To 'Enemies in Or Out of Plants'

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

A crescendo of Congressional protest against tieups in defense industries was climaxed late yesterday with a threat of the electric chair for the "enemies of this Nation, whether in factories or elsewhere."

Representative Hatton Sumners, of Texas, veteran chairman of the Judiciary Committee, which has been conducting extensive hearings on delays in the armament program, indicated in a speech to the House that he does not favor antistrike legislation at the present moment.

But, he added, when it becomes essential to deal with the Nation's enemies inside industrial plants or outside, "I believe that the sentiment of the Judiciary Committee would be to enact whatever legislation is necessary—and if it should be necessary to send them to the electric chair, I don't think any member of the committee would hesitate a split second to do so."

Smith Wants "Action"

Meanwhile, Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, asked for reestablishment of his NLRB investigating committee, which expired with the last Congress. He said he had made the proposal "because I'd like to get some action, in the interests of national defense, on the Wagner Act amendments the House passed last year."

And Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, introduced a bill to raise the draft age limit to 65—in order, he said, "to give the President power to draft strikers in defence industries" and thus require them to go back to work under Army control.

Powers Urged for New Board

On the other side of the Capitol, Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, declared that "defense strikes must be stopped and stopped quickly." He demanded that powers be given the recently established National Mediation Board "to enforce its own decisions," adding that "persuasion . . . has already been tried and failed."

Senator Byrd said that at 2 p. m. he wired Secretary Perkins that all defense strikes, which the Labor Department had proved unable to settle, should be referred to the Mediation Board. He noted that four disputes were passed on to the board "about an hour and a half after receipt of my telegram."

The Virginia Senator also attacked "unreasonable and excessive" charges for membership in unions which a worker must join before obtaining employment in the construction of various Army cantonments and he demanded information regarding this practice from Secretary of War Stimson.

One of the strongest friends of labor in either house, Senator Elbert Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, chairman of the Labor Committee, observed yesterday in connection with the strike situation that "the rights gained by many people may be destroyed by the ill-advised acts of a few."

Senator Thomas said that his com-

The Gallup Poll

Steps to Curb Strikes Approved Overwhelmingly by Public

Survey Before Creation of Mediation Board Shows It Is a Popular Move

This is the third of a series of five articles by the Gallup Poll on the public's attitude toward labor today.

By Dr. George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., March 27.—There can be little question that President Roosevelt's recent appointment of a Labor Mediation Board is an enormously popular move so far as the public is concerned.

As a matter of fact, the President has put into effect a measure approved by the public not only today but for the last several years. Institute studies which have been measuring public opinion on every important labor issue since before Roosevelt's second election, show that a majority of voters not only favor a Federal mediation system, but would actually go several steps farther.

The public believes that mediation should be not voluntary, but compulsory—that is, that employers and workers in defense industries should be forced to submit their differences to a Federal mediation board when a strike threatens.

Moreover, a substantial majority of the voters of the country are willing to take the extreme step of forbidding all strikes in plants or factories turning out defense materials.

These manifestations of the public's attitude—which emphasize again the fact that labor unions face a serious public relations problem at the present time—are

Carnegie Units Are Restored To D.C. Tax Roll

American Tree Association Also Loses Exemption

Restoration of the properties of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, valued at $1,026,031, to the municipal tax rolls were ordered yesterday by the District Commissioners.

They also ordered the tax-free property of the American Tree Association, Inc., 1212-1214 Sixteenth Street Northwest, valued at $68,405, returned to the rolls. Together, the properties will bring the District an annual real estate tax of $19,-152.63 on the basis of $1.75 per hundred dollars valuation.

Properties Involved

Properties of the Carnegie Institution involved are the main building at the southeast corner of Sixteenth and P Streets Northwest, north half of triangle at corner of Thirty-second Street and Broad Branch Road Northwest (application had been made for tax exemption on February 3); Broad Branch Road, north side, between Thirtieth and Thirty-first Streets (applied for tax exemption on February 4); Thirty-second and Jocelyn Streets Northwest (vacant land containing 32,382 square feet); east on Connecticut Avenue on north side of Upton Street Northwest (contains the Gyrophysical Laboratory and X-Ray Building); and a group of 10 buildings located at the northeast corner of Thirty-second Street and Broad Branch Road.

Roosevelt Signs $7,000,000,000 Aid Measure at Sea

Aboard U. S. S. Benson, March 27 (AP).—President Roosevelt, aboard the yacht Potomac on a fishing-vacation cruise, signed the seven billion dollar British aid bill at 10:50 a. m. (E.S.T.) today.

His action makes the huge fund immediately available to establish the United States as the "arsenal" of nations fighting aggression.

Accentuating the record-breaking speed with which Congress voted the money, the bill was sent by airplane to the President's yacht cruising in Florida waters a few hours after legislative action was completed Tuesday. Bad weather, however, delayed delivery until today.

The plane waited for Mr. Roosevelt to get the document back in a mail pouch before returning to Miami.

Last Big Posts In East Africa Fall to British

Cheren in Eritrea, Harar in Ethiopia Are Captured

By the Associated Press

Cairo, March 27.—The British announced tonight they had stormed and occupied Cheren, East Africa's major stronghold of Italian resistance, and captured Harar, second city of Ethiopia.

Thus crumbled what may prove to be the last real ramparts of Italy's African empire.

Cheren, mountain key to Eritrea's capital, Asmara, 45 miles to the southeast, had been defended for seven weeks by 35,000 crack Fascist troops under the command of the Duke of Aosta.

It fell to British and Indian troops after two weeks of the heaviest fighting, on treacherous terrain and in torturous climate.

Harar, ancient walled Mohammedan city of 40,000, lies athwart the British drive toward the Djibuti-Addis Ababa railway, which they seek to cut at Diredawa, 35 miles distant.

Cheren, which military observers say is one of the world's finest natural fortresses, began to crack up when the British crossed the valley in a surprise attack on an Italian hillside entrenchment and captured a brigade headquarters. Fascist officers were cut off before they could retreat.

Italian casualties in the siege—up to yesterday—were placed at between 3,000 and 4,000, although British spokesmen said this was only a rough estimate.

Fascist losses in the final action were described as "very heavy."

Since February 2, the British had

2 Held on Ickes' Complaint of $2 Genealogy 'Gyp'

A complaint by Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes that he was bilked of $2 for a ready-made genealogy and a phony coat of arms led to the arrest of two men yesterday on charges of using the mails to defraud.

When he got a postcard offering him the low-down on the Ickes family tree for only $2, the Secretary told officers, he yielded to curiosity. For his money, he said he got a pamphlet which reprinted portions of well-known works and coats of arms. This last, he said, was surprising, because previous extensive research showed that there was no armorial bearing for the Ickes clan.

Awaiting preliminary hearing next week are Samuel and Benjamin Adelman, brothers, who were associated in the American Research Bureau and the National Research Society, 527 Ninth Street Northeast. Benjamin was arrested in Florida. His brother surrendered

U. S., Thrilled By Belgrade Coup, Pledges Speedy Aid

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

The overthrow of the appeasement regime in Yugoslavia thrilled Washington yesterday and brought a promise of United States aid under the Lend-Lease Act if the Balkan kingdom should be attacked.

News of the coup d'etat that put young King Peter II at the head of an anti-Axis government in Belgrade caused intense speculation here. This began and ended with the question of what a violently angry Germany would do.

To those who have made a close study of the Yugoslav situation, this appeared to be the prospect:

If Hitler, smarting from his worst diplomatic rebuff, should invade Yugoslavia, the Yugoslav army of more than 1,000,000 men would hardly attempt to defend the northern part of the country, which is relatively flat and suited to mechanized warfare. The Yugoslavs would fall back to the mountainous southern part of the kingdom and make a stand.

The Yugoslavs, highly regarded for their fighting qualities, believe that they could hold out against the Nazi legions for at least two months. Then, if forced southward, they would join with the Greeks and the British in the Salonika area for what might be one of the great battles of history.

Would Drive Italians Into Sea

In the meantime, however, the Yugoslavs would have struck at the Italians in Albania and driven them into the Adriatic. They have no doubt that they could do this.

The fact that the Italian troops would have to face this humiliation, it was suggested, might lead Mussolini to try to deter Hitler if the Fuehrer was bent on an invasion. But this, like much else that was said here yesterday, was purely speculation.

The expressed gratification of the United States Government and its bold promise of material aid to Yugoslavia were in a different category. They were concrete.

Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles announced that Arthur Bliss Lane, American Minister to Yugoslavia, had been instructed to state to the new government of King Peter II that information concerning the coup d'etat had been widely welcomed in the United States as a matter for self-congratulation to every liberty-loving man and woman.

Under Lend-Lease Act

Welles said that Minister Lane was further instructed to state to the Yugoslav government that, in accordance with the terms of the Lend-Lease Act, President Roosevelt is enabled—in the interest of the national defense of the United States—to render effective material assistance to nations which are seeking to preserve their independence and integrity against aggression.

At Belgrade Lane said early today, "I have not yet been able to carry out my instructions

Yugoslavia Has Found Its Soul, Says Churchill

British Rejoice to See First 'Quisling' Regime Overthrown

By Robert P. Post
Copyright by New York Times

London, March 27.—News of the Yugoslav coup d'etat came to the British like rain in the midst of drought.

"Early this morning Yugoslavia found her soul," Prime Minister Churchill told a Conservative meeting today and in those words he summed up the feeling of most people in these islands.

That feeling was more than one of satisfaction over the obvious strategic advantages of the Yugoslav defiance of Reichsfuehrer Hitler. It was something deeper. For the first time, as one prominent member of Parliament expressed it today, at least one European nation has risen against a "Quisling government."

At another public meeting today,

Canadian Boat, Sunk With 19 Dead, Once Astor Yacht

Halifax, Nova Scotia, March 27 (AP).—The Canadian naval patrol boat Otter, which burned and sank off Halifax yesterday with the loss of 19 lives, once carried President Roosevelt on a Caribbean cruise as the guest of her former owner, Vincent Astor.

The Otter, it was disclosed tonight, formerly was the Nourmahal, and in her days as a private yacht she ranked almost with J. P. Morgan's Corsair, which has been given to the British government.

She came to the Canadian navy through a series of purchases and was known as the Conseco before the navy renamed her Otter

Belgrade (Friday), March 28.—Yugoslavia sped its army of 1,200,000 to battle stations today on the swift pace of an anti-Nazi, pro-British coup that overthrew the regency government for joining this kingdom to the Axis, placed the boy King Peter II in full power, and held the deposed regent, Prince Paul, under military arrest.

At the same time German occupation forces in Bulgaria were rushing toward the Yugoslav frontier.

An informed source in Sofia said the Nazi southward movement of troops, under way since the occupation of Bulgaria, had been stopped suddenly and a rush of Nazi reinforcements was sent in the direction of defiant Yugoslavia.

The military revolt in Belgrade against the Axis alignment began at 2 a. m. Thursday and took control with the force of the army behind it.

The public, vigorously disapproving the Axis pact, hysterically cheered the new regime and called with increasing fervor for war against Germany.

Sky Darkened With Planes

The rush of men to the colors was swift, trains, automobiles and taxicabs were commandeered to take them to the frontiers; military trucks rumbled through the streets, and overhead the sky was darkened with Yugoslavia's warplanes.

German and Italian nationals, gayly triumphant such a little time before, frantically tried to get out of the country.

After the frontiers of the country were opened last evening all travelers carrying German passports were refused entry.

Paul was seized by the army at Vinkovci, important railway junction near the Hungarian border. He had been reported in flight to Hungary or Greece.

A new government headed by the tough old air corps chief, Gen. Dusan Simovic, with the 17-year-old King Peter handed full sovereignty, gave short shrift to the apoplectic German Ambassador, Viktor von Heeren.

Von Heeren rushed to the foreign office Thursday morning as soon as Peter formed a new cabinet.

Cut Nazi Envoy Short

He was given exactly six minutes to state the German position—reported abroad to be a virtual ultimatum.

When he asked about the new government's attitude toward the Axis pact which the old regime signed Tuesday at Vienna, it was reported that the new Foreign Minister Nomtchilo Nincic replied merely:

"I can't tell you that yet."

Otherwise, the policy of the new government will be based on friendship for the Axis, Nencic is reported to have added.

Neutral diplomats, however, said this was merely an attempt to stall

Army Swiftly Executed Coup As Belgrade Citizenry Slept

Belgrade, March 27.—In the first few minutes after 1 o'clock this morning heavy tanks and antiaircraft and antitank units with full crews rolled out from the Belgrade barracks and moved at top speed to prearranged military vantage points about the sleeping capital.

At about the same time picked units of Gen. Simovic's air force officers were speeding to take command of antitank guns and machine-gun crews as fast as they reached their rendezvous.

Within 40 minutes tanks and guns commanded the great circular Mostar Boulevard intersection on the route to the Dedinje hilltop and the White Palace of the Prince Regent.

Precisely at 2 a. m. Gen. Simovic struck. The sleepy and bewildered cabinet ministers found patrols, accompanied by officers, at their doors and about their homes. Firmly but politely the commanding air force officers instructed the ministers to

Unwilling Godiva

Girl Keeps Engagement Ring But Loses Clothes in Spat

A 21-year-old girl appeared at Police Court yesterday and made application for the arrest of her fiance—he left her nude on a street corner early yesterday.

She charged him with assault in her complaint filed with an assistant district attorney. The warrant was not issued last night but will be released today, it was said.

As police reconstructed the affair, the girl and her boy friend, a sporting goods salesman, were out riding about midnight yesterday. The boy, it seems, wanted to call quits to a three-year engagement and wanted the diamond ring returned.

An argument ensued, reaching a climax [illegible] Avenue and Woodley Road Northwest, where the young woman was found Godiva-fashion on a curb by a passing motorist. He gave her his coat and took her home.

Police responding to a radio broadcast of a woman screaming at the intersection found nothing, as they arrived after the Good Samaritan had removed the girl.

Later, policemen found her, but she insisted she was uninjured and wanted no action taken. For the record, though, she said her boy friend had torn off her clothing when she refused to surrender the ring.

A call to the young man's home last night elicited the information that he "left town Wednesday."

Germans Rush More Troops To Slav Border

for time while the military and internal situations were consolidated in preparation for war.

Despite official "hedging," there was no mistaking the belligerent temper of the populace. All seemed to believe that this country finally had a real "war cabinet" which would break with Germany and Italy.

Greek diplomats jubilantly declared that with even a part of the Yugoslav army to assist, their troops could complete the occupation of Albania in three weeks at most, and then with British aid 2,200,000 tough fighting men would be ready to confront the Nazis.

The Yugoslav public demonstrations for war against the Axis made clear that thousands here desired just such a development.

The "revolution" itself was virtually a bloodless affair, loosed on an unsuspecting government at 2 a. m. Thursday.

Eight hours later the turnover was so complete that King Peter met his new cabinet at the fortress in the heart of the city and rode resplendent on a white charger through the main streets while the cheering people pelted him with flowers.

Reports from the provinces were scanty, but indicated that the coup followed a pattern similar to that in Belgrade, with all the army, from the topmost officers to the lowliest privates wholeheartedly supporting the new regime.

The preparations for war followed with lightning speed.

The capital was decorated with Yugoslav, British, Greek and United States flags.

There were continuous demonstrations on the main street against the Axis powers and cheers for Britain and Greece.

American Minister Cheered

Crowds gathered before the American Legation and gave United States Minister Arthur Bliss Lane great ovations when he entered and left the building.

At the German office, a crowd of nearly 10,000 shouted derisive threats for hours after their leaders displayed six guns which they said were found in desks there.

The same wildly excited demonstrators attacked and battered Germans and Italians in the streets.

The most prominent German victim was the assistant Nazi Air Attache Moser, who was reported by the German Legation to be seriously injured.

The German minister made an angry diplomatic protest.

Several German automobiles bearing swastikas were overturned and wrecked.

The German Legation warned its entire colony to evacuate as soon as possible.

Crowds composed jingles about preferring "death to the Axis" which they roared forth with typical Serb gusto.

They carried caricatures of Hitler and Mussolini.

Some wore British, American and Greek emblems on their coats and carried huge Union Jacks, the Stars and Stripes and the blue-white Greek flag, dug out of the mothballs for the occasion.

They shouted to anyone who looked like an American or Englishman:

"Tell them in Washington and London this is how we really feel!"

Germans who had proudly taken over the city's best hotels and restaurants and other public places in the last few months suddenly went into hiding or left by automobile for the Reich.

Church Backs Coup

The Yugoslav patriarch of the Orthodox Church surrounded by 19 bishops here for a holy Synod meeting, spoke from a balcony.

A great shout went up when he boomed out:

"The church people are ready to protect the honor and glory of our country.

"You should rally around the new King and be prepared for what comes.

"The church is always with you."

From early morning until late at night the Belgrade radio blared forth martial hymns interspersed with the simple proclamation issued soon after dawn Thursday by the Boy King Peter announcing he was assuming the throne.

The revolution was packed with all the dramatic and intensive excitement and high-pitched feeling for which the Balkans are celebrated.

It was a unique revolution started by school children who for two days shouted in classrooms those same feelings which the parents finally took to the streets today and proclaimed to the world with unmistakable fervor.

It was a military putsch, carried out with clock-like perfection.

It all began while the then Premier Dragisa Cvetkovic and his foreign minister, Aleksander Cincar-Markovic were in Vienna signing the pact with the Axis.

While Axis Heiled, They Plotted

As the two leaders of the capitulation government were being hailed by the Axis, Gen. Simovic was busy at home preparing the coup d'etat.

Although reports from the provinces were scant, what happened in Belgrade indicate the army was with the general from the top officer to the lowest private.

Zero hour was set for 2 a. m. Thursday.

There were many indications of how closely guarded the secret was kept.

Cvetkovic himself drove to his suburban home before midnight Wednesday and went to bed.

Vice Premier Vladimir Macek went to Zagreb to try to quiet trouble in Croatia.

One important German legation official remarked that evening:

"Well, it's all over here now. I guess I'll be going to some busier and more interesting place soon."

But at 2 a. m. tens of thousands of soldiers were hauled from their beds, got quick instructions, put on uniforms and steel helmets and strapped full packs on their backs.

They were sent to prearranged points.

In Belgrade they surrounded the police and the radio stations, the Parliament House, all government offices, including the premier's office and the barracks of the gendarmes.

Tanks, antiaircraft guns and light artillery rumbled through the deserted streets.

The police capitulated without an argument and the government offices were deserted.

Meanwhile, out in the suburbs, a picked squad of army officers paid an early-morning call in the premier. Cvetkovic was routed from bed and taken to the war ministry as members of his capitulation cabinet, some still in their pajamas, were being brought in from their beds.

Behind the desks were four high officers who had flown to Belgrade from Sarajevo during the night. Orders were being flashed in every direction.

Army Swears Allegiance

Later in the morning the army took an oath of allegiance to the King, and its readiness to support his decisions was indicated in Peter's first proclamation, broadcast to the nation. The proclamation stated:

"Serbians, Croatians, Slovenes; In this moment so grave for our people, I have decided to take the royal power into my hands.

"The members of the regency council have appreciated the correctness of the reasons for my action and immediately resigned at their own accord.

"My royal army and navy have at once placed themselves at my disposal and are already carrying out my orders.

"I appeal to all Serbs, Croats and Slovenes to rally 'round the throne.

"Under the present grave circumstances this is the surest way of preserving internal order and external peace.

"I have charged Army Corps Gen. Simovic with the formation of a new government.

"With trust in God and the future of Yugoslavia, I appeal to all citizens and all authorities of the country to fulfill their duties to king and country."

The new cabinet line-up shrewdly represented all elements in racially-diverse Yugoslavia.

Vladimir Macek, Croat peasant leader, was held over as vice premier, and portfolios were handed to Dr. Frank Cubrilovic, Serb peasant leader, and Srdjan Budisavijevic, both of whom had resigned from the old cabinet rather than capitulate to the Axis.

Second Vice Premier Jovan Jovanovic resumed his position, Nincic returned to the foreign ministry he held in 1924, and Lazare Markovic returned as minister of justice after a two-year interlude.

Others in the cabinet included: Smon Kutte, finance; Gen. Ilic, war and navy; Trisunovic, education; Andres, commerce; Kulonovic, mining; Kulovic, labor; Grolgol, social welfare; Josip Torbar, postal; Kosanovic, food; Dakovic, minister without portfolio.

The new cabinet has 22 members compared with 17 in the old. Ten are newcomers to politics.

Athens Hails News Of Yugoslav Coup In 'Wildest Joy'

Copyright by New York Times

Athens, March 27.—News of the Yugoslav government coup and apparent turnabout was received here with the wildest joy. The first bulletins were broadcast on the radio and announced in movie theaters and a virtual holiday prevailed.

The streets became great reading rooms as crowds perused extras. The appeals court stopped business and one judge called in the lawyers to drink beer in celebration. Wounded soldiers in the hospital were as happy as children and threw pillows about.

At the front the troops were exuberant and mocked yesterday's Italian loudspeakers in the front lines, which had summoned the Greeks to give up now that Yugoslavia was an Axis ally.

from Washington but expect to do so very soon" at a meeting with Yugoslavia's new premier.

Lane told of an enthusiastic demonstration in progress in front of the United States Legation.

He commented wryly that communications had been "rather difficult" all day Thursday.

He said he had heard nothing of German troop movements, and declined comment on other angles of the coup that overthrew the Yugoslav "Axis" government.

Constantin Fotitch, the anti-Axis Yugoslav Minister here, conferred with Acting Secretary Welles just before noon and was told of the American attitude.

Minister Fotitch, who, as a Serbian cavalry officer, fought the Germans and Austrians in the World War, told reporters at the State Department that the new government under the 17-year-old King Peter II was "truly representative of the feelings of all of the population."

He said its policy would be "the preservation of peace, but at the same time complete preservation of our national independence, sovereignty and dignity."

Minister Fotitch, the members of the legation staff and all Yugoslav consular officers in the United States sent an impassioned cablegram to Belgrade in which they pledged their loyalty and devotion to King Peter II.

The diplomat also told his sovereign that all Yugoslavs in the United States were filled with joy over his ascent to the throne.

There are approximately 800,000 Yugoslavs in this country. They include the Slovenes in the steel mills of Cleveland, the Dalmatian sailors and soldiers in southern California, and the Croats and Serbs in the automobile factories of Detroit and in the mills and stockyards of Chicago.

These groups, which 24 hours before were bemoaning Yugoslavia's absorption by the Axis, yesterday were bombarding Minister Fotitch with jubilant messages about the coup d'etat.

The view was expressed here by students of the Balkan situation that the revolt against Prince Paul and his appeasement cabinet came just in time. Tomorrow, they said, might have been too late.

On its face, the pact signed by Yugoslavia with the Axis powers, these observers said, was not so bad. It merely granted Germany the right to ship ammunition trains and hospital trains across Yugoslavia; German troops would not use Yugoslav territory.

"But the people of Yugoslavia knew that promise wouldn't be kept," said one man close to the situation. "They remembered other promises that Hitler made and broke. They knew also that the government which has now been overthrown would continue to yield.

"There is no doubt but that the coup d'etat came at the zero hour. The Germans soon would have started an ammunition train across Yugoslavia. They would have blown it up and cried 'Sabotage.' Then, accusing Yugoslavia of having violated the terms of the pact, they would have moved in with troops to 'maintain order.' It is an old, old story with Hitler.

"Having invaded Yugoslavia, Hitler would have had a clear field all the way from Berlin down the Vardar Valley to Salonika."

As seen from here, any one of a number of things may now happen. Germany may enter into a new pact with King Peter's government, a pact perhaps not much different on its face than the one which caused the revolt. But one thing now has been made plain by the Yugoslavs: They will not allow Germany to send troops into the country under any pretext. For Germany to try to do so means war.

If the Italians had conquered Greece, the situation would be entirely different. Then Yugoslavia would have been wholly surrounded by the Axis and would have had no alternative but to capitulate. As it is, the fighting Yugoslavs can lose to Germany in Yugoslavia and still have a battlefield to fall back on—Greece.

Grimas the situation appeared yesterday, it was not without an element of humor. The spectacle of high-ranking Nazis welcoming Japanese Foreign Minister Matsuoka one day and proudly pointing to Yugoslavia's adherence to the Axis and then having the pact exploded the next day—this brought many a chuckle in the State Department and along Embassy Row.

Churchill Pledges Britain's Might To Aid Yugoslavs

Churchill, after announcing "this good news," said that it was proper to cherish the hope that Yugoslavia now had a government fit to defend the country.

"We will give all the aid we can to those who are fighting to defend their freedom and their native land," Churchill said, "and I am sure the President of the United States will be actuated by the same generous feelings . . . I am certain that his sympathies and aid will also be extended in full measure to the Serbian people."

The British had been hoping that a revolt would take place in Yugoslavia. But while some experts here have been optimistic about Yugoslavia there is a large school of thought which said Yugoslavia was through. Now they have been proved wrong and while it is early yet to make any predictions, it would appear that the Yugoslavs are quite ready to go to war with Germany, Italy, Bulgaria and anybody else except Britain.

There is good evidence here that the latter statement is true.

Indeed, the British would not be surprised if the Yugoslavs, within a short time, were attacking the Italians in Albania from the rear.

It was being said freely here that the tremendous efforts by Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden to construct an anti-Axis front consisting of Greece, Turkey and Yugoslavia had failed. Apparently it had failed when the Yugoslav government signed the tripartite agreement. But at the moment it seems to have succeeded gloriously, if today's favorable news continues. Anyhow the British think so.

Greece is already heartened in its resistance against the Italians and the coup will probably serve to strengthen the Greeks against the German threat.

been at the gates of Cheren, on which they marched following their swift eastward push from Kassala, Anglo-Egyptian Sudan frontier town, late in January. Umm Hagar, Agordat and Barentu fell in quick succession and the Fascists fell back on Cheren.

As they retreated, the Italians blew up the only western road to the town, causing hundreds of tons of rock to slide down the mountain side.

Thus blocked, the British were left the alternative of storming 6,000-foot heights.

Again and again crack Scottish Highland troops and mountain-trained Indian regiments charged positions defended by the ablest Alpini the Italian command could muster.

Under the torrid sun, peaks and ridges changed hands frequently under attack and counter attack.

During one seven-day period, the British announcement said, the Italians launched seven desperate counter-attacks which were beaten back.

Despite the heavy losses from these attacks, the British said frankly that the Italians fought better at Cheren than in any other stage of the African campaign, but the powerful blows of the Royal Air Force finally swung the tide in British favor.

The R. A. F. command announced that more than 120 tons of bombs were dropped on the stronghold during the last 12 days and nearly 40 tons the last four days.

Peter Occupies Balkan Hot Seat of Royalty

Following is an intimate sketch of young King Peter II—written by Seymour Berkson, managing editor of International News Service, who studied the Yugoslav royal family at close range while he was stationed abroad as a foreign correspondent and published a book on Europe's royal families several years ago after exhaustive research into the subject.

By Seymour Berkson

Author of "Their Majesties—A Royal Merry-Go-Round"

New York, March 27.—The throne which 17-year-old King Peter II now occupies as a result of today's coup d'etat is undoubtedly the hottest royal seat in all Europe.

It is stained with the blood of scores of murders that have marked the turbulent history of this polyglot kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes since its very foundation.

This slender, soft-spoken, dark-haired lad normally would not have ascended the throne until his eighteenth birthday, some 22 weeks hence.

Too young and inexperienced to be entrusted with the real duties of state which will be performed from now on in his name, King Peter will undoubtedly confine his activities to rubber-stamping the decrees and decisions of the militant cabinet formed under Premier Gen. Dusan Simovic, chief of the Yugoslav air corps and one of the most pro-British officers in the army.

In Peter's veins flows the blood of a strange conglomeration of ancestors. On his mother's side, his great-great-grandmother was Britain's Queen Victoria, but his maternal grandfather was the late King Ferdinand of Rumania, a descendant of the German Hohenzollerns.

On his father's side, Peter can trace his ancestry back to the founder of the Yugoslav dynasty—George (The Black) Karageorgevitch, a fiery-tempered buccaneer who rose to power in the early 1800's.

Karageorgevich led the Serbs in revolt against the Turks, but he was killed in his sleep by Milos Obrenovitch, chieftain of a rival clan, who sent the murdered Karageorgevich's head to the Sultan at Constantinople as a token of his own loyalty of the Turks.

Married Carol's Sister

From that time on the family "war" of Karageorgevitch vs. Obrenovitch was grimely continued by each succeeding generation, with the crown passing from one side to the other—until June 11, 1903, when an army coup d'etat, a lot bloodier than the one which has just placed Peter on his throne, resulted in the murder of the then King and Queen, the last members of the Obrenovitch family to occupy the throne.

The present King Peter's grandfather—Peter I—was called back from exile and crowned King, but he was a sick man and the actual duties of the throne passed on to his son, the tall, handsome Crown Prince Alexander (father of the present King)

It was in the Serbian city of Serajevo that the Austrian Archduke Franz Ferdinand was murdered with a "shot that rang around the world" on June 28, 1914, and in the World War that followed Alexander led the Serbian troops to victory with the Allies—a victory cementing bonds of friendship with Britain that have played an important part in the present situation.

On August 16, 1921, Alexander's father died and he became King of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes" as the kingdom came to be known after it had been expanded following the war.

The following June, Alexander made a marital alliance with Rumania by marrying Princess Marie Mignon, daughter of the then powerful Queen Marie of Rumania and sister ofthe recently dethroned Rumanian King Carol.

And the next year on September 3, 1923, Peter was born.

Actually, Peter's royal duties began—and in a certain sense his childhood ended—on October 11, 1934, at the age of 11 when the shy boy was suddenly summoned back to the royal palace in Belgrade.

Two days before, his father, King Alexander, had been assassinated at Marseille, shortly after his arrival aboard a Yugoslav warship on a visit of state to France.

Peter was proclaimed King in the national cathedral at Belgrade. He sat on a throne for the first time the same day his father's body lay there in state. King Alexander had already provided for the emergency in a secret will. Meanwhile in accordance with Alexander's written instructions, his cousin, Oxford-educated Prince Paul, became chief regent.

German Nationals Leave America

OUTWARD BOUND—A mother and a child boarded the Spanish liner Magallanes at New York yesterday, bound with nearly 200 other German nationals for Spain and Germany. Dr. Hans Borchers, German consul general, denied reports they had been ordered to evacuate the United States but said that hundreds of Germans had been seeking visas because they feared they would be unable to "earn bread and butter" if the United States "openly" joined the Allies dress and accompany them to general staff headquarters. To all questions the officers merely answered "come!"

Just after 2 o'clock a patrol of "King's Men" rushed past the guards of Premier Cvetkovic's spacious hilltop home and knocked on the door. Another guard barred the way. Eyewitness reports said the guard declared:

"The premier cannot be disturbed."

"Nevertheless, disturb him," commanded the officer.

"He must not be disturbed, and you cannot enter," replied the guard.

"Stand aside," commanded the officer, whereupon the guard raised his rifle. The officer drew his pistol, pointed it at the guard's chest and repeated: "Stand aside;"

The guard stood aside.

The premier dressed rapidly without question and accompanied his visitor to general staff headquarters, where other members of his cabinet already were arriving.

In the modest little Majestic Hotel entrance curiosity was almost bursting. At 3:35 a. m. a closed car appeared from the direction of the prefecture. The interior lights were on. The car held three air force officers and—Premier Cvetkovic.

This correspondent called the British Legation. A cheery voice answered the telephone. "Who's here? Bloody well everybody! We're having champagne. Come on . . ."

Back in the Hotel Majestic the telephones were working locally and there was coffee, then suddenly and from a distance there came that unmistakeable sound of a crowd in excitement. The sound grew, expanded and took shape while windows flopped open over head, sleepy heads appeared out of them and jaws dropped at the sight of the soldiers and machine guns below them.

The shouting grew to a roar and emerged even as the yelling, cheering, screaming mass of men and women, and students and schoolboys swept into view, arms lifted, mouths open and the words almost visible in the morning sunlight:

"Petra Drugy! (Peter II) "Petra Drugy! Petra Drugy!"

Huge Greek and American flags appeared. There was a crash and the sound of splintering glass in the Spomenik off the Terazia as the crowds smashed windows of the German travel bureau.

Through double rings of army guards upon the Terazia they pressed forward until there was another louder crash and the windows of the Italian travel bureau fell in splinters in the street. The roar that went up sounded like Madison Square Garden when it witnesses a knockout punch.

U. S. Plans to Ship ½ Billion In Foodstuffs to Britain

By Cecil B. Dickson

International News Service Staff Writer

Plans for shipment of approximately half a billion dollars worth of food to Britain within 15 months were considered today at a conference between Secretary of Agriculture Wickard and Dr. Thomas Parran, United States surgeon general.

Operation of the plan will begin immediately after President Roosevelt gives his approval. Shipments are to comply with British nutritional needs and the availability of vessels to carry the food.

The money is to come from the $1,350,000,000 item in the Lease-Lend Appropriation Act, earmarked for purchases of farm, industrial and other commodities.

Machinery for the purchase of the foods already is set for operation by the Farm Surplus Commodities Corporation, an agency of the Agriculture Department. The Agriculture Adjustment Administration is prepared to help increase hog production to help meet British needs for pork and lard.

Dr. Parran recently returned from five weeks in Britain, having been sent there by President Roosevelt to learn types of food and medicines needed. The President also designated Parran and Wickard to work out the plan in conjunction with the British food mission headed by Robert H. Brand, and Lloyd Steer, agriculture attache of the American Embassy in London, both of whom came here recently.

The British food mission has informed Wickard and Parran of its expected requirements for the coming 15 months. Cheese, evapoated and dried milk, grape fruit juice, dried fruits, pork, lad, died beans and similar items containing high vitamine content top the list of needed foods. Vitamin concentrates, tobacco and certain cereals also are on the list.

Under the plan to acquire the food, the Agriculture Department will seek to make purchases without unduly increasing domestic prices to consumers here and at the same time to permit growers to receive as much benefit as possible. There is to be no splurge of buying that will put commodity prices out of line. Instead purchases are to be made gradually.

Even before the President signed the $7,000,000,000 appropriation bill, the Farm Surplus Corporation purchased a quantity of dairy products, pork, lard, prunes and raisins, having been informed that the British wanted some shipments of these foods at an early date.

A move is being weighed to have the AAA spur the production of hogs this summer and fall to provide pork and lard for the British.

Thus far the British mission has indicated wheat and cotton are not on the priority list, since Canada has a huge surplus of wheat and other British possessions have large quantities of cotton.

Information given this Government is that with the loss of ships due to the German blockade, it is more important that only foods essential to a rounded out nutritional diet be sent at present.

However, in preliminary negotiations with the British, it was learned, the President has informed them that he expects them to take some of the 10,000,000 bales of United States Government owned cotton and a large quantity of the 300,000,000 bushels of wheat as soon as possible.

In connection with working out the British food problem, Secretary Wickard has surveyed the domestic food supply and found that surpluses exist in all basic farm commodities, fruits and vegetables.

Baering Down On the News

By Arthur "Bugs" Baer

It cosis England so close to $60,000,000 a day for war that you can keep the difference.

Germany is spending that much; if Russia gets into the scrimmage she will spend the same amount, and so will we. In a year the entire world will be as busted as hearts in New York and fenders in Los Angeles.

The world will spend close to $100,000,000,000 a year for shooting crackers. And when it is all over it will not prove anything more than an idiot catching his thumb.

Posterity will get the bill for that just like eggs make omelets. We don't build for the future any more. The future is billed for it. Well, it looks like posterity will take swimming lessons in black ink and drown in the red.

Nazis Threaten Yugoslavia With Partition

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Friday), March 28.—Unofficial German political circles opined today that Yugoslavia knows perfectly well that for her now to renounce the Axis pact would be tantamount to giving the "go sign" to Germany to march in to compel her to live up to it.

It was understood by these circles that the German government, which last night demanded an explanation of Yugoslavia, left no doubt that the new government must come through with an equivocal statement of its position on the pact.

Mere phrases like "bringing Yugoslavia neutrality into line with the pact" were considered insufficient.

That the new Yugoslav government cannot do otherwise than stick to the Axis was regarded as self-evident by German political circles.

Refsal to regard the pact as binding, it was intimated, might lead directly to dissolution of Yugoslavia much in the manner of Czecho-Slovakia.

Might All Claim Slices

Hungary, Bulgaria, Rumania, Italy and Germany might all claim slices of the kingdom if it declined to "play ball," it was said.

In the German view, the new government cannot disavow the Vienna signatures of its former Premier Dragisa Cvetkovic and former Foreign Minister Aleksander Cincar-Markovic.

The general belief was expressed that British Prime Minister Churchill was triumphant too early and that United States Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles extended his congratulations too soon.

Amounts to Urgent Request

Spokesmen said last night that the German communication to Yugoslavia amounted to an "urgent request."

The Yugoslav affair intruded suddenly upon German-Japanese conversations which the Axis considers historic.

To all outward appearances, however, the mission of Yosuke Matsuoka, Japanese foreign minister, was moving according to plan. After a wreath-laying ceremony at the tomb of Germany's memorial to the Unknown Soldier in the Unter den Linden and a long talk—in English—with German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, the Japanese leader conferred for 2½ hours with Adolf Hitler. These talks were described as thoroughgoing conversations, fraught with full understanding.

Tonight Von Ribbentrop was host at a reception for the Jepenese.

Pope Appeals Again for End Of Bloodshed

By International News Service

Vatican City, March 27.—Pope Pius XII tonight voiced a new appeal for peace in an address which informed Vatican circles thought might herald the opening of a worldwide drive to end bloodshed and suffering.

The Pontiff voiced his appeal in a speech to patrons of the Naples Hospital.

Pope Pius said:

"Why does a return to peace require the cost of such bloodshed and suffering when men of intellect with good will could conquer their passions and pardon offenses?

"Justice and mutual equity would be sufficient for reestablishment of peace and tranquility, making it possible for nations to live together on the face of the earth.

"For our part, we shall never fall short in our efforts and prayers. We shall do everything to hasten the event."

Agreement Leasing Western Hemisphere Bases Sites to U.S. Formally Signed in London

President Sends Notice of Action To Congress

By George Bookman

Post Staff Writer

A formal agreement turning over seven British base sites in the Western Hemisphere to the United States was signed yesterday in London by the two governments and transmitted to Congress by President Roosevelt.

"International developments" since the original agreement to trade 50 over-age destroyers for the base sites was announced have emphasized the value to the Western Hemisphere of these outposts of security," the President told Congress.

The United States receives 99-year leases in Newfoundland, in British Guiana and in the islands of Bermuda, Jamaica, St. Lucia, Trinidad and Antogua. Arrangements for United States bases in the Bahamas will be concluded speedily, the agreement provided.

No action by Congress is required.

Army, Navy Satisfied

Authoritative sources said that the United States obtained in every instance the base sites desired by military experts. Acting Secretary of State Welles said yesterday that the Army and Navy were fully satisfied with the base locations the United States has secured.

The agreement provides that in Bermuda British censorship shall not apply to mail to and from the United States postoffices in the base areas, but the United States will examine all nonofficial mail of this nature to safeguard British interests.

Bermuda is the headquarters for British censorship of mail between the United States and Europe.

A special emergency clause gives the United States the right in time of war or other emergency to exercise any necessary authority in the territory around the specific leased areas.

No Customs Duties

There is specific provision that no customs duties shall be levied on supplies and materiel imported into the base areas for United States use.

In a protocol to the agreement Canada's special interest in the defense of Newfoundland was recognized.

Construction of defense installations already is under way on some of the sites, secured from Britain in the September 3 destroyer-bases trade which President Roosevelt compared in significance at the time to the Louisiana Purchase.

Signing for the United States were Ambassador John G. Winant, Charles Fahy, Assistant Solicitor General; Brig. Gen. Harry J. Malony, of the United States Army, and Commander Harold Beisemeler, of the United States Navy.

Prime Minister Churchill, Lord Cranbourne, secretary of dominions, and Lord Moyne, colonial secretary, signed the document for Britain.

Stimson Urges States to Speed Home Guards

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Secretary Stimson yesterday urged States to speed up formation of home guard units, to cope with expected labor disturbances which could not be handled by local authorities.

Many States face a critical situation, he said at a press conference, because the National Guard has been called into Federal service and they have not organized home guards to fill their place in case of civil disorder.

"The situation is made critical by the national emergency which confronts us, with all of its possible consequences," he stated. "One very important consequence that we have to anticipate is what we know as 'Fifth Column' activities by outside subversive forces."

Another consequence, he added, is labor disturbance. Whenever there is great industrial production with possible changes in price levels, Stimson said, there are likely to be industrial disturbances involving labor and capital.

"Some of those have arisen now to show what is likely to be here," he continued. "Our history has shown that out of such a labor situation great disorders might arise which would put out of the power of the local authorities."

With the local Guard, which has always acted in such cases, not available, a "substitute" must be provided, the War Department chief said.

Only 27 or 28 States to date have stages to organize home guards under the authority of an act passed by Congress last October, and only a very few of these actually have forces in existence.

He named Massachusetts, New York, Florida, California and Pennsylvania as States which have units set up and equipped with arms.

Aircraft Production Rises

Both Maryland and Virginia have advanced the establishment of home guard forces, Stimson said, but, as far as the War Department knows, have gone no further. The Virginia guard will total 2,900 consisting of 54 battalions, and the Maryland unit will have a strength of 2,000 men.

The Army head also disclosed that American aircraft factories have been turning out combat planes in substantially increasing quantities the past two months.

He was asked if aircraft production had not remained substantially unchanged during the past three months around 1,000 planes a month. In reply he said that there had been a "very satisfactory increase" in output during February and March, especially as to "tactical craft."

Undersecretary Robert P. Patterson added that February was "a very good month" in combat aircraft and that March would be also.

Glass Demands U. S. Conveys

This disclosure raised the possibility that plane deliveries to England had been considerably stepped up, but Stimson declined to comment on this phase, except to say: "We are working very hard."

Meanwhile, Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, in blunt language, urged the use of American warships to convoy aid to Britain if necessary if submarines impede deliveries of planes and munitions.

"If they interfere with us," he said, "we ought to shoot the hell out of them.-I am for convoys if Germany sinks our ships."

Secretary Stimson, in commenting on the need for home guard forces to combat "fifth column" activities, remarked that "nations which may be potential enemies have shown great adaptability in that" made especially for women. Carnegie Units Are Returned To Tax Rolls has maintained an enviable position in the world of science, but notwithstanding this great and beneficial work, we have to conclude that it is not an educational institution within the ordinary and common meaning of that phrase."

Church Units Involved

The Commissioners also ordered a portion of a building of the National City Christian Church, Inc., Fourteenth Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, which is used for janitor's quarters, to be appraised by the assessor and, along with the top floor of the building which is vacant, be returned to the tax rolls. The main church building was, of course, tax exempted.

"It is our opinion that this church has ample room for its religious activities without using any portion of this old building," the board stated.

Properties found to be properly exempt from the District's taxation were:

National City Christian Church, 1306-1310 Vermont Avenue Northwest; the American Legion, 1608 K Street Northwest; the Convent of the Religious of the Sacred Heart of the District of Columbia, 1717-1719 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest; John Wesley A. M. E. Zion Church, Inc., southeast corner of Fourteenth and Corcoran Streets Northwest; Metropolitan African M. E. Church of Washington, 1444 Q Street Northwest, and the Bethel Church, 1330 M Street Northwest.

$7,620,000 in Property Returned to Tax Roll

Walter L. Fowler, assistant corporation counsel and chairman of a board investigating tax-exempt properties here, last night told the Arkansas Avenue Community Association that since the first report of his committee to the Commissioners on February 4, approximately $7,620,000 worth of property has been returned to the District tax rolls.

He said that the rate of property tax exemptions was so great that in 30 or 35 years there'd be little property left for the municipal government to tax. Thus far in March, Fowler declared, applications for tax exemption cover property valued at $1,740,000.

It will take the examining board a year to go through a list of 2,000 tax-exempt properties, he asserted.

Leaders Plan Conference On Tax Bill

Congressional tax spokesmen and Treasury experts will confer with President Roosevelt shortly after his return here before starting formal action on the 1941 revenue bill, it was learned here last night.

A decision on the approximate amount to be raised—currently estimated between $1,500,000,000 and $2,000,000,000—is expected to be sought at the conference, together with a general understanding on sources to be tapped.

Sentiment of House committeemen recently has been swinging away from an experimental tax measure and trending toward rate changes based largely on the present tried tax structure, and scientifically worked out so as not drastically to disturb the Nation's economy.

Unofficial estimates, it was learned, point toward a possible $80,000,000,000 national income for the year, which might yield from present rates about $11,200,000,000. Leaders must determine how much additional should be raised toward the next fiscal year's expected $24,000,000,000 spending total.

Medical Society To Hear Lecture By Dr. Mohler

Dr. John R. Mohler, chief of the Bureau of Animal Industry, will give the annual Mober lecture at Georgetown University tonight at 8:15 before members of the Medical Society of the District. He will discuss "The Conquest of Brucellosis in Animals and Its Relation to Human Welfare."

The lecture will feature the Kober Day exercises in Gaston Hall, today being the birthday anniversary of the late Dr. George Martin Kober, former dean of medicine at Georgetown, who endowed a foundation to extend recognition to leading medical scientists.

Dr. Mohler was selected as the 1941 lecturer by the local medical society because of his long and successful fight against the scourge that has proved so costly to the cattle industry, especially, and steels many thousands of humans.

Army to Shift Air Command Center Today

Headquarters of the Army's striking air arm moves from Langley Field, Va., to Bolling Field today.

Troops and equipment have been coming into the local air base by plane and truck in small increments for the past two days, and the actual moving process will continue over the weekend. Under orders issued by Lieut. Gen. Delos C. Emmons, commander of the General Headquarters Air Force, however, the nerve center of the striking force will shift from Langley to Bolling at midnight tonight.

Some 40 officers and 200 enlisted men are involved. The bulk of the men are expected to arrive tomorrow and take up quarters in new barracks at Bolling Field. Gen. Emmons and the officers of his staff will have offices at the field but will live in town.

About 100 of the Army's 162 combat squadrons are included in the General Headquarters Air Force. The remainder are in Hawaii, Panama, Puerto Rico, Alaska and the Philippines, under separate commands.

Although official figures are not available, it is estimated that Gen. Emmons has fewer than 1,000 combat planes available at present. Under the expansion program, however, this force is expected to be enlarged 15 times by mid-1942.

Fire Vaults for School Records Advocated

Chevy Chase Terrace Citizens Association has adopted a resolution urging that the budget for the present year be altered to provide for immediate installation of fireproof equipment for irreplaceable records in the elementary, the junior and senior high schools of Montgomery County, it was announced yesterday.

The resolution also urged construction of only fireproof schools and units in the building program of this year and for the future.

U. S. Combats Price Upswing In Quicksilver

Copyright by New York Times

A direct government effort to force a reduction in the price of quicksilver was made yesterday in the form of a statement by Leon Henderson, commissioner of price stabilization of the National Defense Advisory Commission, that there is no justification for a "sky rocketing rise" in the price of this product since August, 1939.

Henderson contrasted a current price on the New York market of $180 per flask of 76 pounds with a price of $64, which obtained less than two years ago. Quicksilver is an essential product for the Navy, but Henderson warned against the fear that it will not purchase any quicksilver in substantial quantity before next October 1, "with a probability of requirements thereafter being less than those called for during the early part of the year."

Coincident with the statement on prices, the Office of Production Management ordered a general priorities system imposed on producers of ferro-tungsten, tungsten metal powder and tungsten compounds, similar to that imposed upon aluminum and magnesium. E. R. Stettinius, jr., director of priorities, said that there is no shortage of these types of tungsten.

Under this new regulation all defense orders, including those placed by the British government, will be granted preferential ratings, known as A-10, for these classes of tungsten. A rating of B-1 will be assigned to manufacturers whose products "are used in connection with the manufacture of defense orders."

Producers of tungsten may continue, for the time being, to fill general customers' orders in those cases where defense needs are satisfied.

Increased Farm Appropriations Approved

A Senate appropriations subcommittee yesterday approved a vastly increased agriculture appropriations bill providing $450,000,000 alone for parity payments to farmers.

The parity payment increase, adopted on motion of Senator Russell (Democrat), of Georgia, would guarantee farmers an estimated 75 to 85 per cent of price parity.

Outstanding among many boosts in the $950,000,000 House farm bill's provisions, the parity item compared with $212,000,000 approved by the House and authorized in the budget for that purpose.

Russell's subcommittee will report the bill to the full appropriations committee this morning for final action.

The Senate meanwhile voted to tighten marketing controls over corn and wheat under the present farm program, increasing penalties for marketing "excess" from the present 15 cents a bushel to 30 cents for corn and 50 cents for wheat. Producers could be asked to vote on applying marketing controls for two years, one year, or not at all.

Across the Capitol, the House Agriculture Committee acted to increase Government loans on wheat and cotton this year from 52 to 57 per cent of parity, amending a bill to increase the penalties for marketing wheat and corn raised outside a farmer's Federal acreage allotment.

Senate subcommittee increases in the House Agriculture appropriation bill raised the total of the measure to over $1,800,000,000.

Russell said the $338,000,000 increase in the parity price fund was designated to increase purchasing power of producers of cotton, wheat, corn, rice and tobacco who comply with the Federal farm program.

The subcommittee approved House action on another $500,000,000 for soil conservation payments to farmers complying with the program.

Dr. Wilkinson Outlines Qualities Of True Religion

Real religion means a fusing of the qualities of justice, mercy, humility and in doing and being right, Dr. Howard A. Wilkinson declared yesterday at the Southeast Federal Center, where he spoke at the Church of St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, where President Roosevelt worships when in Washington.

"Religion doesn't simply mean following certain ritualism, or having an emotional experience, for these are simply outward manifestations," he said. Today's speaker will be Dr. Peter Marshall, pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

Suffering can strengthen, rather than weaken humanity, the Rev. Daniel Justice said last night in the closing message at Trinity Methodist Church.

French Fear Starvation Line Is May 15

Following is the fifth of a series of dispatches by Ralph Heinzen, United Press Bureau manager in Vichy. It does not take into account a report from Vichy Wednesday that the Government of unoccupied France had agreed to send to occupied France 1,355,000 head of livestock and other foodstuffs in exchange for 4,000 tons of wheat, a smaller amount of potatoes, and 200,000 tons of sugar. Editor's Note.]

By Ralph Heinzen
United Press Staff Writer

Toulouse, March 26.—Unoccupied France's starvation line will be May 15 French officials believe.

Food experts who have charge for the Vichy government of the pooling and distribution of the small amount of wheat and meat left are agreed that at the present rate the food will all have been consumed by May 15 at the latest.

In nine departments which border the Mediterranean all local stocks already have been consumed and the population is fed from day to day by shipments from the outside.

My own observations tend to confirm the estimate of French experts that, when it no longer is possible to find wheat and meat in other parts of unoccupied France, the unhappy Mediterranean provinces will be entirely without food within 24 hours. That stage may come any time between late April and mid-May.

If the authorities further reduce rations, it must be done soon or be delayed until late May.

The conclusion of the experts, however, is that without deliveries of wheat through the Nazi blockade there will be starvation before June.

Of 17 departments in the hunger belt, nine have absolutely no stocks of wheat left, one department shows the most serious situation is in the region directly fronting the Mediterranean and just across from the rich north African granary of Algeria and Tunisia. Prospects are very bad for the region of Perpignan—where there are still more than 100,000 Spanish refugees living in concentration camps—and the life along the "Riviera coast" of the French Riviera, where the kitchens and larders of luxurious hotels are absolutely empty.

Here in Toulouse the situation is typical of those regions which are called upon to feed less fortunate neighbors.

The grain is being baked almost whole to make it go further. Normally French wheat gives 65 to 75 per cent flour, 100 tons giving 60 to 65 tons of flour. But at present 82 tons of flour is obtained from each 100 tons of wheat and the result is almost whole-wheat bread, which the peasants dislike.

In the last year, children are fare better than their elders. If the American Red Cross can continue regular distribution of supplies of milk, there will be no famine among expectant babies. The Quakers can feed Cross already has completed plans for distribution through existing French hospitals and charity institutions of milk supplies sufficient for numerous babies and their mothers and enough to last the life gauge of children up to 14 years of age.

But the Red Cross has no plans to feed or care for anyone over 14 years of age except a few mothers nursing babies and a handful of invalid oldsters.

In hunger-ridden there is a noticeable increase in thieving.

While I was in Toulouse last week, police broke up a band of food gangsters who have been pilfering farms on the Garonne Valley. One farmer caught thieves butchering two pigs in a field. Police said the thieves had been promised 18 francs a pound (about 32 cents) for all the meat they could deliver to a bootleg market.

Other farmers complained that raiders came the same night and dug the seed potatoes up for marketing.

Sen. Lewis' Widow Back From Illinois Portrait Unveiling

Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, wife of the late Senator Lewis, of Illinois, has returned to Washington from Springfield, Ill., where the State Senate and House held a joint ceremony for unveiling a portrait of the Senator in the rotunda of the State Capitol.

The new Republican Governor, Dwight Green, made the principal speech in praise of Senator Lewis' character and career. Other addresses were made by Federal Judge Michael Igoe, former Congressman; Secretary of State Edward Hughes and United States District Attorney Howard Doyle. A delegation of friends and officials went from Chicago to attend the ceremony. Mrs. Lewis spoke a few words of appreciation as she unveiled the portrait.

The life-sized portrait was painted by Louis Betts, of Chicago and New York. A second portrait by the same artist has just been placed in the National Capitol, in the hall of portraits of the Senate wing.

Burned Tanker Sinks While Being Towed in

New York, March 27 (AP).—The tanker, Cities Service Denver, which exploded and burned off the North Carolina coast Monday night, sank while being towed by the cutter Shoshone, last night, Coast Guard headquarters said today.

Officers said the ship went down about 40 miles south of Diamond Shoals Lightship, N. C. Nineteen crew members were missing after the blast and their bodies were believed to have gone down with the ship.

Date Is Apr. 12, But Do Cherry Blooms Know?

Japanese cherry blossoms and Easter lilies will hold the Capital spotlight over Easter weekend, that is, if they act according to schedule.

The Cherry Blossom Festival committee yesterday set April 12 and 13 as the dates for the celebrations at the Tidal Basin. The festivities had been planned for April 5 and 6 to coincide with the Army Day parade but nature failed to cooperate.

The blossom committee, headed by Edgar Morris, now has assurances from the weatherman and the experts of the National Capital Parks Service that there will be an abundance of blooms to add to the gay spirit of Easter Sunday.

Similar to last year proceedings the program this year will begin at 2:30 p. m. on April 12 with the water pageant at the Tidal Basin and the crossing by the Cherry Blossom Queen to be crowned at the northern part of the Tidal Basin.

Pretty Nancy Alden Strong, daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Alden G. Strong, selected as the queen, will reign over a court of 19 princesses who will be chosen from among as many private schools of the city.

Following the coronation, during which time the Marine Band will play and the Columbia Light Opera Company will present a program of dancing and music. The scene will then be shifted to the Polo Field where a contingent from the Arlington Cantonment will present a retreat parade.

The complete program will last 2½ hours and will be repeated on Easter Sunday. Seats will be provided at the coronation stand and invitations will be sent to the various citizen and official groups of the city. Although 1,000 seats will be provided, the committee promised plenty of cleared standing room.

On Saturday night, April 12, a gala Cherry Blossom ball will be held at Uline's Arena with music by a nationally known band. Proceeds from the affair will underwrite next year's festival. Tickets will sell for 85 cents before the day of the affair and $1.10 on April 12.

Prosecutor William A. Wachenfeld said he would move immediately to extradite Workman from Brooklyn, where he has been held under $75,000 bail for a year as a material witness in the Murder, Inc., investigation.

Tax Exemption For Mickva Asked in Suit

Tax exemption of the property housing the Washington Mickva or ceremonial bath was asked in a suit filed in the District Court yesterday by the combined congregations of the Jewish faith here.

The complaint, filed by Attorney Herman Miller, said the congregations have maintained the Mickva at 616 M Street Northwest since 1921 and that for seven years a house of worship occupied part of the ground. The law exempts church property from taxes.

Two Are Implicated in Death Of Girl at Crisfield, Md.

By the Associated Press

Crisfield, Md., March 27.—Charges to dispose of Miss Swift's body will be filed against two persons in the death of 25-year-old Marie Swift, of Crisfield, at a hearing before Trial Magistrate Fred Holland at 2 p. m. Saturday, State's Attorney F. Kirk Maddrix said today.

Maddrix said a 48-year-old woman had admitted she attempted to perform an illegal operation on the young garment worker, whose body was found along a roadside near here on Tuesdy morning.

The State's attorney said he regarded the case against the woman and against a male friend of Miss Swift, who will also be arraigned, as virtually complete. The accused woman's son, he said, will be held as a material witness.

Maddrix said the woman confessed to him after seven hours' steady questioning. He said the first break in the case came when the woman's son admitted helping Maddrix said he would ask that the woman be held on a charge of manslaughter.

According to the version of the story which Maddrix said the woman gave him, Miss Swift went to her house about 8:30 o'clock Monday night and died before the operation could be completed.

The woman, estranged wife of an oyster shucker, then went to look for her son, leaving the girl's body lying on the living room floor, Maddrix said.

Next they turned out the lights, Maddrix said, "and the boy told us he dragged the body out of the house and placed it between himself and his mother in their small coupe."

Then, the attorney said, they drove to the edge of a nearby woodland and placed Miss Swift's body alongside the road, where it was found the next morning.

Maddrix said the accused woman was the mother of four children.

4 Autos Figure In Crash; 1 Hurt; Damage Is $1,000

A four-car collision at Thirtieth Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest last night slightly injured one man and did $1,000 worth of damage to the cars involved.

According to investigating officers, a car driven by Ralph Tappe, 49, 917 I Street Northwest, collided with an automobile operated by Val A. Lea Vans, 40, of 1911 Minnesota Avenue Southeast.

Vans' car in turn crashed into one operated by James S. Ruby, jr., 35, of 3051 Idaho Avenue Northwest, whose car careened into another driven by Samuel A. Jacobs, 51, of 4711 Davenport Street Northwest.

Tappe, who was the only person injured, was treated at Emergency Hospital for a cut lip and then taken to the Third Police Precinct, where a driving-while-drunk charge was entered against him.

In America's vast army camps today, the bugler sounds "the call to the colors" through a huge, pivoting megaphone.

WITH SHELLS FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE!

Extensive conveyor systems like that above are necessary, in Oldsmobile's great manufacturing arsenal at Lansing, to transport shells from "upsetting" machines to shot-blasting machines to turning lathes—to keep production rolling in a steady, unbroken stream.

NUMBER ONE job of the Olds Motor Works today is for the United States Government. With Oldsmobile, as in all other Divisions of General Motors, National Defense comes first!

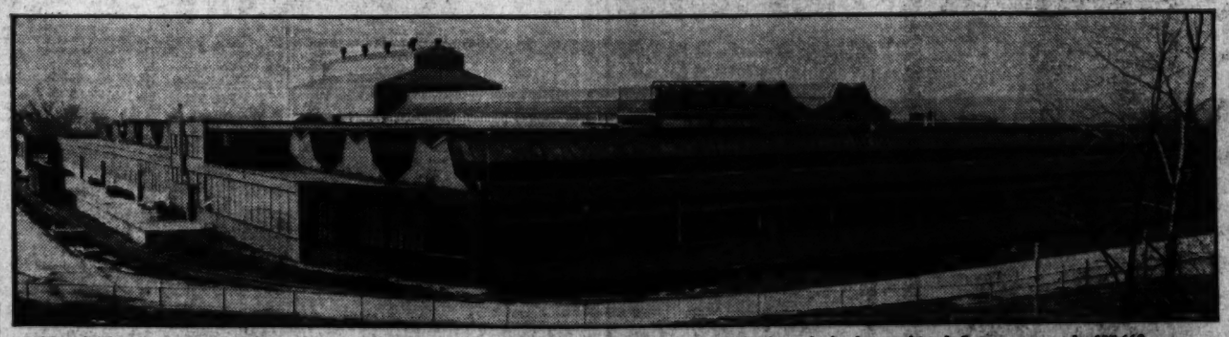
To speed the manufacture of ammunition for the U. S. Army's 75-mm and 105-mm guns, Oldsmobile has turned its modern forge plant at Lansing, Michigan, with its 157,662 square feet of floor space, into a great manufacturing arsenal—has converted high precision machines and machine tools to the purpose of forging and turning shells—has mobilized a regiment of highly skilled workmen, from among its veteran employees, to concentrate solely on shell production.

But Oldsmobile feels that its duty to national welfare goes further. Oldsmobile hopes to back its intensive defense program with a continuance of production activities to meet consumer needs—to the end that the jobs, the security and the well-being of everybody everywhere may be maintained and strengthened, the American way of living preserved!



Oldsmobile's newly transformed munitions plant occupies a 50-acre tract of the Olds Motor Works properties. It includes four separate departments—Die and Maintenance shops, "Upset" and Press department, Hammer shop and Heat Treat and Machining department, together with an enclosed receiving dock and a railroad loading dock. Its combined floor space totals 157,662 square feet. Originally built for the production of heavy duty automobile parts, such as crankshafts, the former Oldsmobile forge plant proved ideal in layout and set-up for quick conversion into a modern, efficient shell manufacturing armory.

Harvester Pickets, Police In Melee

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Ind., March 27.—State police seized 82 leaders and supporters of the C. I. O. Farm Equipment Workers' Organizing Committee today after a 20-minute, club-swinging skirmish between city police and pickets at the gates of the International Harvester Co.'s Richmond plant.

The clash occurred as the company reopened the plant—closed by a trike since February 17—in the face of a defy by a union leader that the strike would be continued even "if it means the spilling of blood in the gutters."

Many heads were struck in the wild melee, which ended with city police arresting several pickets, but only two persons—Policeman Louis Daniels and Milford Roberts, a picket—were injured everely. Daniels suffered a broken nose and bad cuts and Roberts was treated for a scalp wound.

Capt. Walter Eckert subsequently led State police, a force of whom had been concentrated in Richmond in event of trouble, in a raid on the union's downtown headquarters and there arrested 64 men and 18 women, including Clifford Kerr, president of the local union, and Robert Foley, an organizer.

Kerr had told strikers in a mass meeting last Sunday:

"If it means the spilling of blood in the gutters of North Fifteenth Street or anywhere else, we are willing to make the sacrifice."

Capt. Eckert said charges of rioting and inciting to riot might be placed against some of the union leaders.

Wielding ash clubs and shouting, "We will not be moved," pickets blocked entrance to the plant as a long line of workers, accepting an invitation from the company to return to their jobs, approached shortly before 7 a. m.

City police and special deputies, armed with night sticks, started to push aside pickets to make way for the returning workers. The pickets resisted. Clubs and sticks were swung and thrown, and in a few minutes there were many bloody heads. Kerr said 26 union members were injured.

The police finally gained control and the workers entered the plant without taking any part in the skirmish. Police Chief E. H. Duckett estimated that 600 workers passed into the plant for its resumption of operations.

One of the pickets arrested was a 19-year-old girl, who, Duckett said, fought "fiercely."

Kerr had just completed a statement for newsmen when the State police raided union headquarters. In the statement he said:

"They are not going to get away with this brutal, undemocratic attack on the workers. The union intends to fight."

C. C. Calkins, superintendent of the plant, said, "The company has no choice but to reopen the plant for the majority of employes who desire to return to work."

Union demands include an increase in the basic minimum hourly day wage from 55 to 75 cents for men and from 35 to 85 cents for women, abolition of piecework, and specific reemployment guarantees and partial pay for workers inducted into military service.

Bethlehem Steel Formulates Counter-Proposals to Union

By the Associated Press

Bethlehem, Pa., March 27.—A union official said tonight the company had formulated counter-proposals to a five-point program offered by the C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee for settlement of a strike at the Bethlehem Steel Co.'s home plant.

John V. Riffe, assistant director of the C. I. O. union, made the announcement as he entered a mass meeting to explain the day's developments to the strikers.

"The company has agreed to enter a conference at 10:30 o'clock tonight and remain until a settlement is reached," he said. He added he did not know what the counter-proposals involved.

A city police spokesman said two shots were fired into the air tonight when an automobile drove in front of a home near one end of the plant. He said there were no injuries and no arrests.

A short time after the shooting, Mayor Robert Pfeifle announced he had appointed "a secret committee" to suppress "vandalism and depredations" in the city.

He said the committee's duties would include "curbing of window breaking, overturning of automobiles and damaging of homes."

The mayor said he acted after reports reached him of shots being fired and threats being made against the wives and families of Bethlehem workers.

Asked if the 200 State police on duty here couldn't perform the functions given to the group he named, Pfeifle replied that the troopers were intended only to maintain law and order at the steel plant.

Two other announcements during the day indicated progress toward an agreement.

They were made during a recess in a conference between representatives of the C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee and W. L. Trumbauer, the company's industrial relations director.

Meanwhile, with picketing limited to a dozen men at each of the nine gates of the 5-mile-long mills and State police remaining on guard, the company claimed operations on the third day of the walkout found "more than 85 per cent of the regular force at work." An S. W. O. C. spokesman said "25 per cent would be more like it."

R. A. Lewis, general manager of the plant, said in a statement the company hoped the conference would "lead to an amicable settlement of differences in the very near future."

Thomas Lambert, United States Labor conciliator, asserted company and union were "not too far apart" and added:

"The union has submitted a proposition and we are trying to work out the differences. We are hopeful . . ."

Walkout Authorized

Buffalo, N. Y., March 27 (INS).—Three thousand C. I. O. steel workers voted unanimously tonight to authorize officers of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee to call another strike at the Lackawanna plant of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation.

The walkout, should it be called, would be in protest to the company's alleged failure to comply with terms of the agreement which settled the two day riotous and bloody strike at the Lackawanna plant on February 28.

Denied bail by United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage, William Thomas Mumforde, colored, 20, confessed slayer of Miss Fannie Cohen, 60-year-old dress shop proprietor, was committed to jail to await trial last night.

The colored man pleaded guilty "to shooting the woman but not premeditated murder."

"I admit going to the shop to rob the woman and shooting her, but I didn't mean to kill her," Mumforde said.

OPM Clashes With Murray On Allis Strike

uary 31 and involving 1,400 employes.

Knudsen and Knox's statement came after receipt of the following telegram from Murray:

"It is my understanding that you met with the officials of the Allis-Chalmers company yesterday and that you did not consult either the officials of the United Auto Workers or the officers of the local union at Allis-Chalmers. Under date of March 1, Mr. (Sidney) Hillman (of the Office of Production Management) and you submitted to the Allis-Chalmers workers a proposal, with the understanding that if accepted by them you would also insist upon its acceptance by the company. The Allis-Chalmers workers accepted your program. The company refused.

Calls It a Lockout

"Since then the workers have come to regard the Allis-Chalmers situation as a lockout. Why do you not insist upon compliance with your original proposal? By what powers are you and Secretary Knox authorized to issue ultimatums when provisions are already made and by executive order issued by the President of the United States for the orderly adjudication of such disputes, first through the conciliation service of the Department of Labor: failing there, to be certified by the Secretary of the Department of Labor to the National Mediation Board."

Knudsen and Knox replied:

"You were familiar with our proposal to issue an appeal to the workers to return and negotiate while plant was in operation. The final decision to ask the plant to open came after the fact was established that the original strike vote was obtained by fraudulent means. To continue the strike in view of this and subject critical defense material to further indefinite delay would seem entirely unreasonable. Contrary to your statement, we issued no 'ultimatum' in connection with reopening the plant. We did appeal to the patriotism and loyalty of men and management to resume production vital to the safety of the Nation—production which has been at a standstill for approximately nine weeks. We are of the opinion that such an appeal should be far more compelling to American citizens than any peremptory order."

Union to Consider Offer

Although earlier in the day Harold Christoffel, president of the C. I. O. local union, had shouted to a mass meeting of strikers that "no one goes back to work" until the union so voted and that scabs would lose their jobs "after the union wins," his union last night showed a less recalcitrant attitude after the Knox-Knudsen telegram was made public.

The meeting, which will take place an hour and a half before the first shift of the plant's total 7,800 employes is to report for work, "will consider the company's offer," according to union officials. They discounted, however, the likelihood of agreement to the Friday opening proposed in telegrams to each worker by the management after receipt of the defense chief's request of two days ago.

Although R. J. Thomas, international president of the striking union, telegraphed the local that the factory should remain closed until the management accepted the OPM formula for settling the strike, the fact that union officials were willing to hold a meeting today was seen as a distinctly favorable development.

The fraudulent character of the strike vote taken January 21 and ending production on vital gun forgings, battleship - propelling machinery and powder-plant equipment, was revealed yesterday in formal findings of the Wisconsin Employment Relations Board, which ordered a new vote within 15 days on whether employes wished to strike.

2,200 Votes Cast by Officers

The original vote, the board found, contained at least 2,200 ballots cast by union officers, and as a result of "the misconduct of such election," less than a majority of the employes voted in favor of the walkout, which therefore did not comply with conditions set by the State board.

A sidelight on the OPM-Navy order to reopen the plant was revealed yesterday when Secretary Perkins stated from Los Angeles, that the demand was made without her knowledge or consent. She hastened to add, however, that "there is complete harmony" and that agreement had been reached before she left Washington on a vacation trip to certify the case to the NDMB if no settlement were reached by Wednesday night.

From Madison, Wis., meantime, came word from Clarence A. Dykstra, chairman of the mediation board, that he had asked the new organization to meet today to give immediate action to the four cases on its agenda.

First call for board action, it was believed, will be the Harvester dispute, which took a bloody turn yesterday at the Richmond, Ind., plant. Following a wild 20-minute melee between city police and pickets at the gates of the plant, 62 leaders of the striking C. I. O. Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee were arrested and probably will be charged with rioting and inciting to riot.

The clash took place as the company attempted to reopen the plant, in the face of a defy issued Sunday by local union president, Clifford Kerr, the strike would be continued "if it means the spilling of blood in the gutters."

At Bethlehem, where peace was restored after a turbulent picket line eradication Tuesday night, union and company representatives issued cautiously optimistic statements at the end of a day-long conference, the first since the strike was declared Monday afternoon.

Little Miss 'Vivien Leigh'

An 18-year-old New York girl, who was elected president of the Vivien Leigh Fan Clubs of America "because I look so much like her," came to town yesterday to seek a passport to England to interview her movie actress idol on "how can we help England?" Elaine Elliott, with a blue and white hat perched in pokebonnet fashion reminiscent of "Gone With the Wind," said her intended mission to England is "very important." After calls at the State Department and the Red Cross office, Miss Elliott sat in her room at the Annapolis Hotel yesterday, met the press, and mustered energy for a continued attempt today to get the passport. The Fan Clubs, whose motto is "We Love Vivien Leigh," want to do something to help England, Miss Elliott explained

Labor and defense quarters in Washington, mildly encouraged at the conference's progress, were nevertheless of the opinion that the serious nature of the strike prevented any "fooling around" and indicated that unless real prospects for a quick settlement were sighted by this morning, the case would go immediately to the Mediation Board.

Board Gets Busy

The board's secretary, E. P. Marsh, was instructed by Dykstra last night to ask Vice Chairman W. H. Davis, who is in New York to be in Washington today and begin immediate direction and disposition of the cases. Dykstra said he would return here Monday.

Marsh indicated that three-man panels, consisting of one representative each from the categories of employer, employe and public members, would be created, one to consider the Harvester case, one to take the Condenser Corporation strike, and the third to work on both Universal Cyclops and the neighboring Vanadium Corporation.

The Condenser Corporation, whose A. F. of L. workers are involved in a curious dispute against a National Labor Relations Board order having the effect of terminating bargaining rights of the local union, manufactures condensers and capacitators for radios, under subcontracts from firms supplying the finished products to the Army Signal Corps and military airplanes.

Make Ammunition

The Chicago plants of the International Harvester Co., make artillery ammunition components and Army tractors. Vanadium makes the highly specialized alloy for steel of high tensile strength and harness, used in armor plate and key machine tools. Despite the small number of men involved, the plant is said to be of crucial importance to defense production.

So also is the Universal Cyclops factory which makes special steel for armor-piercing bullets, propellors for Curtiss-Wright planes, steel for fuses, superchargers, machine guns and airplane valves.

Possibility of a shutdown of United States Steel Corporation plants next Monday night because of a lack of agreement with the SWOC was dispelled last night when the present wage-hour agreement was extended to April 8, a week beyond its former expiration date.

The news was announced in a joint statement by company and union officials after a day of conferences, which declared "there need be no public apprehension about a possible suspension of steel production" in the United States Steel system.

Other encouraging news of the day was the agreement in San Francisco on a formula that there would be neither strikes nor lockouts in the Pacific Coast shipbuilding industry. All disputes will be settled by arbitration, the pact provides. It was negotiated by the Government-sponsored shipbuilding stabilization conference between unions and employers. A. F. of L. officials announced the pact, and the official C. I. O. observer at the conference said his organization "would go right down the line on a proposition such as this."

At Beaver Falls, Pa., a C. I. O. dues-collecting drive forced suspension of operations at the Babcock & Wilcox Tube Co. plant, which is producing materials for the United States military forces and the British. Plant Superintendent Luke Sawyer said the plant first closed last night and the suspension was extended when "fewer than 200" of the 2,800 employes passed dues picket lines and entered the plant on the 7 a. m. shift today. He added that he had notified the OPM and the Navy of the shutdown.

Boston Strike Settled

The strike of 700 employes of the Walworth Co., at Boston, which tied up work on $500,000 worth of defense contracts ended last night when members of the Steel Workers Organizing Committe (C. I. O.) unanimously accepted an agreement drawn up earlier in the day.

The C. I. O.-United Automobile Workers of America called a strike at the Sullivan Machinery Co., Michigan City, Ind., which had been making air compressors for the Army and Navy and subcontracting machine tool orders for defense industries. About 350 persons are employed at the plant.

Complilyng with a request from Knudsen, 78 strikers at the Vanadium Corporation plant, at Bridgeville, Pa., voluntarily began loading ferro-vanadium for shipment to other plants producing defense materials.

Some 400 strikers, who quit work more than six weeks ago in protest against the hiring of five nonunion plant guards, previously had refused an OPM request to load the metal and had stood by while office workers prepared the first shipments under the protection of State motor police.

$100-Plate Jackson Dinner Canceled

where a $25 contribution suffices. Democratic big and little wigs will gather on schedule Saturday night to hear local party pep talks and the President's speech by radio.

The President's speech will be broadcast from 9:30 to 10 p. m. from the wardroom of the yacht Potomac cruising Southern waters.

His change in plans was flashed to reporters aboard the U. S. S. Benson by Stephen Early, Presidential secretary, as the President began preparing his address.

Reynolds is understood to have communicated with the President's yacht before calling off the Washington arrangements. In a brief statement, the party treasurer said another date for the local dinner will be "announced later."

"The President's speech radioed from the yacht Potomac, at sea, will be carried to all the other dinners throughout the United States, and will, of course, be heard in Washington," Reynolds said.

"The $100-plates," always an important source of Democratic revenue, attracts the party's socially and politically elite in the Capital with the President and Mrs. Roosevelt both honor guests. Mrs. Roosevelt this year is in the South to join the President on his return trip.

One committee spokesman said that usually between 200 and 400 tickets are disposed of in the last two days before the dinner. They would not hold their usual attraction with the President absent. Those who already had contributed expected to dine with the President.

Since the Hatch Act, tickets have not been actually "sold." Contributions are invited, and to all giving $100 or more, invitations are issued. Between 1,200 and 1,400 guests normally eat filet mignon withtrimmings to help swell the party's war chest.

Public Favors Step to Halt Strikes seen in many surveys of public opinion by the institute, the latest of which has just been completed.

Shortly before the President announced the creation of his 11-man Labor Mediation Board headed by Dr. Clarence Dykstra, the institute began a Nation-wide survey of opinion on the question:

"Would you favor a law compelling employers and unions to submit their differences to a Federal Labor Board before a strike could be called in industries connected with the defense program?"

The results are:

Yes	85%
No Opinion	8

In four previous surveys on the same issue—the first conducted in April, 1937,—the compulsory mediation idea has been favored by more than 80 per cent in every case.

The Public's Attitude

Thus far both Congress and the President have held back legislation to outlaw strikes in the defense industries. Although some observers argue that since the Government has the right to confiscate the property of recalcitrant employers, it should have equal right to crack down on recalcitrant labor unions by outlawing strikes, others feel that such a step would be unnecessary and unwise. One of the main questions is what position the public would take on such legislation.

The public's attitude as revealed in studies by the institute can be summarized as follows:

First, the majority believe that labor in the defense industries has every right to protest against wages or hours which it considers unfair.

Second, it does not believe, however, that labor in defense plants should strike.

Third, it is prepared to approve legislation forbidding strikes in defense, as the following survey shows.

"Should the Government forbid strikes in industries manufacturing materials for our National Defense program, or should the workers in these industries continue to have the right to strike?"

SHOULD FORBID STRIKES	72%
SHOULD ALLOW RIGHT TO STRIKE	20
DON'T KNOW	8

Pro and Con Arguments

Previous institute studies have repeatedly shown that the public is not against labor unions as such. It believes by an overwhelming majority in the right of collective bargaining. What criticisms the public has are not criticisms dealing with the principle of collective bargaining, but only with the tactics or methods used.

This fact is shown in the following survey in which the institute invited a cross-section of the Nation's voters to set down what they believe to be the chief arguments in favor of labor unions and the chief arguments against them.

The first question was:

"What do you think is the chief argument against labor unions?"

The arguments most frequently given were:

1. They use their power recklessly and unscrupulously.
2. Too many racketeers and exploiters among labor union leaders.
3. Too many strikes.
4. Poor leadership.
5. Too many communists in labor unions.
6. Not democratic—leaders are dictators.
7. Dues and fees are too high.

The second question was:

"What do you think is the chief argument in favor of labor unions?"

1. They protect the rights of the working man.
2. They keep wages up, and improve hours and working conditions.
3. They give labor a chance to express its views.
4. They provide job security.

mittee has before it only one bill on the strike situation, a measure providing for a "cooling-off" period, proposed by Senator Ball (Republican), of Minnesota. Senator Thomas said that "unfavorable reports" on the bill had been received from the Maritime Labor Board, the NLRB and the War Department.

"The general objections to this bill," said Senator Thomas, "are that the placement of restrictions on labor during the emergency should be considered only as a last resort, and as long as there is hope that other methods of preventing interruption to production will prove effective, the departments do not wish to go on record as favoring any curbing of the rights of collective bargaining and collective security."

Senator Josiah W. Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, chairman of the Commerce Committee, declared yesterday that "delay is not only dangerous; it amounts to defeat of all our plans."

"If there are grievances," he said, "let them be referred to Government arbitration, but in the meantime, the work must go on." He said that "if the President needs further legislation, all he has to do is ask for it."

"I am confidently expecting adequate action by the President upon his return from a vacation which he needed," Senator Bailey said.

The theme of administrative action was likewise emphasized by Representative Sumners in his speech.

"I call on the executive agencies of the Government—because this is an executive job—to bend every energy to get these (struck) plants into operation, to persuade those who will be persuaded," he said.

And, he added to a burst of applause, "Those who will not be persuaded—treat them as the enemies of a great republic ought to be treated."

The Judiciary Committee, said its chairman, "is advising itself of the facts of the situation; but I do not agree with the general proposition that you can bring about results merely by passing a law. I don't want to embarrass the administrative agencies of the Government; but it's absolutely essential that the loyal element of labor be cut away from those who would do this country hurt."

Early in the day, Chairman Dies of the House Committee to investigate Un-American Activities, said that strikes in key industries were "the natural fruit of Communist leadership in labor unions." He reiterated his contention that Harold Christoffel, president of the striking union at the Allis-Chalmers plant in Milwaukee, has "a record of Communist affiliation."

STREET CAR AND BUS SCHEDULES WILL CHANGE MONDAY, MARCH 31 TO FIT THE NEW GOVERNMENT WORKING HOURS . . . . . .

Capital Transit is doing everything in its power to make the new staggered hour system of opening and closing Government Departments work smoothly from the first.

Preparing for these changes has been a big job such as has never been undertaken before in the history of Washington mass transportation since it has been necessary to remake schedules of practically all street car and bus lines of our system, in a comparatively short time.

A small army of schedule makers, checkers, inspectors and supervisors has been working day and night to insure that the new system clicks from the beginning.

Rush hour trips to various locations have been shifted to correspond with the changes in working hours. Operation on the street may show us it is necessary to make other changes—in the Public Service.

While the inevitable "shaking down" process goes on we ask for the cooperation of patrons so that in the end traffic conditions will be better and street car and bus service will be improved as well.

Defense Is Bolstered At GHA Trial

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Through eight blue ribbon witnesses, the Washington doctors who are accused of breaking the Sherman Act in impeding Group Health Association spiritedly defended themselves in District Court yesterday.

Testimony after testimony was produced against the Government's contention that Washington hospitals were "threatened" by the American Medical Association and their facilities denied Dr. Raymond E. Selders because he was the G. H. A. surgeon.

The District Coroner, the superintendent of Providence Hospital, two other hospital executives and four prominent surgeons followed one another on the stand. It was the biggest day for the defense since it began presenting evidence three weeks ago.

Indications now are that the 18 individual defendants, American Medical Association and District Medical Society will rest their case early next week. Yesterday's developments, which at times assumed the character of a counterattack, were viewed as the beginning of the end of the organized doctors' defense.

Leahy Returns

The session marked the return to action of William E. Leahy, chief of counsel for the indicted physicians, after a two-day layoff forced by grip.

Dr. Daniel L. Borden, president of the District Medical Society, but not one of the defendants, testified slowly and deliberately that the Washington Academy of Surgery recommended against hospital privileges being granted Dr. Selders on professional grounds solely.

"We divorced everything else in passing judgment on this man," he said, in the course of cross-examination by Prosecutor John Henry Lewin.

At the time of the adverse report, Dr. Borden was on the credentials committee of the academy, which earlier this month was dropped as a defendant by directed verdict of Justice James M. Proctor.

The committee, at the same time it recommended against Dr. Selders, took similar action against five other surgeons, "at least four of whom were members of the District Medical Society," according to Dr. Borden.

Denies Bias

He averred that the fact Dr. Selders was connected with Group Health Association, which was not approved by the District Medical Society, had nothing to do with the unfavorable report, which was unanimous.

Regarding the contents of a letter received from a Philadelphia surgeon whom Dr. Selders had given as a reference, Dr. Borden said "it damned him with faint praise." The letter, which was read to the jury, mentione dthat the G. H. A. doctor was a good musician and a former civil engineer.

Henry P. Blair, a practicing attorney and an officer of Episcopal and Columbia Hospitals, testified that he never heard of Dr. Virginius Dabney having to admit G. H. A. patients through the "back door" at the former institution, as charged by the Government.

As for Columbia, he said he knew of no acts prejudicial to G. H. A. ever taken by that hospital.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald was brought into the case because, as a staff member, he had something to do with denial of privileges to Dr. Selders by Sibley and Casualty Hospitals in 1938. The alleged conspiracy against G. H. A. covered all of 1937 and all but the last two weeks of 1938.

Voted Against Selders

As a member of the Casualty credentials committee, Dr. MacDonald said he voted against Dr. Selders on his interpretation of three letters regarding the applicant's qualifications, although all three seemed favorable on the surface.

The candidate did not seem to have sufficient experience, the witness said.

"I believe I said this, at the time," he testified, "that in view of certain controversies lasting over a period of months, these things should be discarded from our minds and the applicant considered from information at hand. And I so did."

"What relation did your conclusions bear to G. H. A.?" Leahy asked.

"I knew little about G. H. A.," Dr. MacDonald replied.

"Was your Sibley decision influenced by G. H. A.?"

"That didn't enter into my mind. I was only interested in getting more information (about Dr. Selders)."

Saw No Coercion

Dr. James A. Cahill, chief surgeon of Providence and Georgetown hospitals, testified emphatically that he saw "absolutely no threat, no coercion" in the American Medical Association's recommendation that staff members be limited to members of their local A. M. A.-affiliated medical societies.

Sister Rosa, superintendent of Providence, likewise could recall no "threat" having been associated with the suggestion. She was the only witness who did not undergo cross-examination.

Similarly, Dr. Claude C. Caylor, secretary of the Providence executive staff, saw nothing unusual in the A. M. A.'s recommendation. It was contained in a letter accompanying a report which an association investigator prepared on the fitness of Georgetown and Providence to establish surgical residences.

The other two surgeons, besides Drs. Cahill and Borden, who tanchly defended the hospitals for excluding Dr. Selders were Drs. James F. Mitchell and Elijah W. Titus.

Capt. Becker, Firefighting Hero, to Retire

Capt. Otto Arthur Becker, 57, hero of the Knickerbocker Theater disaster and veteran of 31 years of firefighting service, will retire Monday, the Commissioners announced yesterday.

Holder of many commendations and decorations, Capt. Becker is one of the first to obtain a voluntary retirement under the new act which permits retirement of policemen and firemen at the age of 55 if the applicant has completed 25 years of service.

Capt. Becker was awarded a blue ribbon for his rescue work during the Knickerbocker disaster on January 28, 1922, when 98 were killed and 102 hurt. For his work in the Kann warehouse fire, on January 10, 1925, he received commendations from the Commissioners. In 1924 he won an award from the Commissioners for meritorious service and again received commendations during the flood of the Potomac River on May 4, 1928.

For the last ten years Capt. Becker was assigned to No. 24 Engine Company and has served as acting chief of the Fourth Battalion. He entered the Fire Department August 1, 1910, and received his first promotion in 1918. He was made a lieutenant in 1925 and a captain four years later. He resides in Silver Spring, Md.

Appeal Stays Closing of Three Va. CCC Camps

By the Associated Press

The National Park Service yesterday suspended for 30 days an order to close three Civilian Conservation Corps camps in Virginia State parks to permit an investigation of their importance.

Conrad L. Wirth, recreation and land use director of the service, acted after hearing an appeal from Clarence Smith, director of the State conservation commission, and Randolph Odell, director of the State parks.

The order would have closed on April 1 camps at Douthat, Hungry Mother and Fairy Stone State parks, which have operated since the park areas were started.

Smith and Odell also solicited the aid of Senator Byrd and Representatives Flannagan, Burch, Woodrum and Robertson, of Virginia, to forestall the closings.

After a conference Smith said Wirth had agreed to hold the order in abeyance for at least 30 days and to make every effort meanwhile to make a personal inspection of the parks.

Urban Property Of Jews Seized By Rumania

Bucharest, March 27 (U.P.).—The Rumanian government took over by decree all urban property of Jews who were not Rumanian citizens prior to 1916, with limited exceptions. All rural property of Jews was taken over by the decree of last October 8.

The decree stated that the national Rumanianization committee would estimate the value of property taken from Jews and pay therefor in 3 per cent State bonds.

Gen. Ion Antonescu announced simultaneously with issuance of the decree that the transfer of such Jewish property to the State was to "establish the historic right of the nation and to restore our national tradition and Christian conception of ownership."

Va. County Vexed; Army Won't Take Its Moonshiners

Rocky Mount, Va., March 27 (A.P.).—Franklin County moonshine whisky, so plentiful during prohibition days that the Wickersham Commission called this southwestern Virginia County the wettest in the Nation, is giving the local draft board a headache, and not from drinking the stuff.

So many young men otherwise eligible for Army service have been barred by convictions on liquor charges that leading citizens feel that law-abiding registrants are carrying an undue burden, it was said.

The State Selective Service Board has been asked to study the situation and, if possible, obtain a ruling that will permit the Franklin Board to induct men who are eligible except for a liquor law violation.

Under present regulations, the Army will not acept men convicted of a felony, and in prohibition days nearly every violation of liquor laws was a felony.

Woman Victim of Assailant Is Improved; Talks to Police

Mrs. Ruth A. Street, 38, victim of an unidentified assailant Thursday, was in an improved but still serious condition at Casualty Hospital last night while police sought her assailant.

Considerably strengthened by a blood transfusion, Mrs. Street was allowed to talk to Detective Sergt. Jeremiah Flaherty, of the homicide squad, and she repeated her story of the attack but was unable to supply any additional information.

Flaherty said he was told Mrs. Street, an attractive brunette, was alone in her apartment at 1629 E Street Northeast, about 11 a. m. Wednesday when a colored man came to her door saying he was sent to repair a gas heater.

When the man entered, Mrs. Street related, she asked him if it was not the gas company's practice to employ white men. With this she said the man apparently took offense, struck her over the head with a blunt object and fled.

The man made no attempt to attack her criminally, nor did he search her rooms for money, she said.

Investigation by police disclosed that the gas company nor the agent for the apartment house had received a request from the Streets for service to the heater.

Doctors said last night they believe the woman will recover.

Recreation Board

With plans for general reorganization of the District government temporarily sidetracked, it is pleasing to note that efforts to bring about piecemeal improvements are still going forward. The bill to set up a District recreation board is a case in point. That measure would bring about a consolidation of recreational agencies sought by the local community for ten years. It has the support of the Board of Commissioners, the National Parks Office and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. If the Board of Education gives its approval, enactment of the bill will doubtless follow with little difficulty.

The present system, which divides responsibility for a recreational program among several agencies, is wasteful and inefficient. Washington cannot hope to use its recreation facilities to the best advantage until one single agency is in a position to carry out a comprehensive program. It is important, of course, that school playgrounds remain under control of the Board of Education and that various recreational activities continue to be integrated with the school curriculum. That is why the bill provides for a representative of the Board of Education on the proposed recreation board and assures the school authorities final control over all their recreational facilities.

Particularly in one respect the current bill is an improvement over its predecessors. The board it would create would be composed of representatives of the Commissioners, the Parks Office and the Park and Planning Commission as well as the Board of Education. But all of these officials could be outvoted by five members representing the citizens of the District. It would thus be a truly local board. At the same time it would draw upon the school and park systems for advice and support. The recreational program approved by this agency would be carried out by a professional superintendent chosen for his training and experience in this field. The bill seems to offer the District the best opportunity it has ever had to attain a unified and improved recreational system.

A British Agent

If Italians are a bit puzzled over the state of affairs in their sunny but unhappy land, it is difficult to blame them. Take this situation, for instance. Mussolini appointed Gen. Fisconti Prasca to command the Italian forces in Albania. He appointed Marshal Rodolfo Graziani to lead the Italian armies in Libya. He appointed Marshal Pietro Badoglio to be chief of staff. Mussolini is always right. At least that's what the Italians have been told for going on 19 years. That means that Gen. Prasca and Marshals Graziani and Badoglio were just about the smartest and ablest and best men to be found anywhere in the kingdom to carry out the Duce's grandiose plans for building the next Roman Empire. To doubt that is to doubt Mussolini's infallibility, and no good Fascist would commit so flagrant an act of political blasphemy.

But what has happened? Gen. Prasca led the Italian armies into Greece only in due course to find that they had taken two steps backward for every step forward. Prasca was replaced by Gen. Ubaldo Soddu, and Badoglio was replaced by Gen. Ugo Cavallero. Soddu has since been replaced by another Fascist general, and so has Cavallero. And now Graziani has resigned, his place being taken by Gen. Italo Gariboldi. The assumption behind these repeated changes in the Italian high command must be that the men who held those key posts in Albania and Libya were not all they were expected to be. Which means that Mussolini isn't so hot at picking victorious generals. Which means, further, that the slogan "Mussolini is always right" has to do with a period in the past and can have no relation to the present. To follow that logic to its inevitable conclusion the successive resignations of Prasca, Badoglio, Soddu, Cavallero and Graziani should be followed by the resignation of Benito Mussolini. If they were wrong, he was wrong. If they were incompetent he, as their sponsor, was obviously so. Yet while they go, Mussolini stays on. To this the bright boys in the class will immediately raise their hands and, without waiting for teacher, say: Ah, yes, but Hitler wants Mussolini to stay. This may be. But our own guess is that Mussolini is really a British agent in disguise, indeed the most successful of all operating out of London, if success is to be judged by results.

The Labor Crisis

The outbreak of violent combat at the gates of American defense plants is a truly disturbing spectacle. Employers and workers alike know that the United States is facing a crisis as grave as any in our history. Most of them understand, or ought to understand, that the key to security for the United States and other democratic countries lies in the output of American factories. Yet the heads of workers and policemen are being battered, animosities are running wild and machines supposed to be turning out defense weapons are standing idle because of disputes that should be settled amicably around the conference table.

It is a grave reflection on American democracy that a crisis of this sort should arise at a moment when a far greater crisis commands the cooperation of every citizen. This is a time when individuals ought to place their interests as employers and employes second to their interests as free men in a great democratic country. The totalitarian threat to popular government is serious enough in any event. But the danger to our country and to others dependent upon us for arms and munitions to defend their independence will be multiplied if the filling of defense orders is delayed by an epidemic of strikes.

The Government must not permit our preparedness program to be scuttled in this way. The Knox-Knudsen order for reopening of the Allis-Chalmers plant in Milwaukee strengthens the hope that positive and courageous action will be taken wherever it is necessary, and the temperament of Congress indicates that drastic legislation will be passed unless the present outlook improves. Public patience, too, has worn thin. In the light of these facts self-interest should induce union leaders and company officials to adjust their differences without stoppage of work, even if appeals to their patriotism have left them cold. For managements and workers to indulge in a spree of strikes at this time would be nothing short of suicidal.

As a first step in the present crisis, therefore, disputants should reread President Roosevelt's recent executive order calling upon employers and employes to "exert every possible effort to assure that all work necessary for national defense shall proceed without interruption and with all possible speed." That order also makes it the duty of employers and employes to notify the Conciliation Service and the OPM of any threat to strike or any proposed change in working conditions. Strikers who have walked out during the week since this order was issued are obviously out of step with the Administration's plan. That is even more strikingly true of walkouts now being planned without giving the Conciliation Service and the new National Defense Mediation Board a chance to explore the issues.

Sober second thinking should convince everyone involved in these disputes that Americans must not fight among themselves when our national security is threatened. That is the basic consideration which should guide the actions of every group in the present critical situation. Employers and unions could put an end to strikes without further delay or additional Government machinery by voluntarily accepting the responsibilities with which the President has charged them.

New Migrant Problem

The House Committee which has been investigating the plight of destitute migrants devoted a well-spent day to the problems created by another type of migrant—the defense workers and their families who are converging on this already overcrowded city. The National Capital was suffering a severe case of growing pains long before the defense program was launched. The 1940 census placed Washington first on the list of big cities for rapidity of growth during the past decade, with an increase of over 36 per cent in population. Since last spring it is estimated that 65,000 more people have come here to live and the influx is continuing. Of course no city of the size of Washington, however well equipped to care for the health, education and protection of its residents, can be expected to accommodate so many newcomers within so short a time.

The House investigating committee has performed a valuable service for a long-suffering community by giving publicity to the really shocking conditions resulting from the past neglect and present unpreparedness. Overcrowded schools, hospitals that must turn away patients with communicable diseases, inadequate living quarters with boarders herded together sardine-like in improvised bedrooms—these are not predictions of things to come, but statements of fact about present conditions. More houses, more hospital space, more schools, new streets, new sewers, improved police and fire protection and better transportation facilities are urgently needed. Funds for such improvements must be found, which means that Congress should lose no time in providing the District government with additional revenue.

Yugoslavia Revolts

It is yet too early to grasp the whole significance of the swift and dramatic climax to the turbulent events at Belgrade. But it is already plain that the Yugoslav revolution represents a political defeat of the first magnitude for Hitler's New Order. The arrests of Premier Cvetkovich, of Cincar-Markovich, the foreign minister, and later of Prince Paul, the Chief Regent, can be interpreted only as Mr. Churchill interpreted them yesterday—as a complete repudiation by the Yugoslavs of the humiliating treaty signed last Tuesday in Vienna. One report says that already the new government has formally denounced the treaty. Whether or not this proves to be accurate, the mood of the people is a sufficient guarantee that appeasement by Yugoslavia is at an end. Even if it wished to cling to the discredited treaty a government whose most urgent task is to restore order and to defend a gravely endangered nation would be unlikely to risk a policy so conducive to civil war.

Belgrade has experienced a popular uprising and not a palace revolution. This is plain from the fiercely anti-German temper of the rioting students, of the cafe crowds, of the peasants who marched on the capital and the mountaineers who marched on Cetinje, and from the encouragement given to the demonstrators by the Orthodox clergy. The revolt sprang from the refusal of the Yugoslav people, especially the Serbs and Montenegrins, to permit their independence to be relinquished under threats. Except for the ignominous end of the regency, the monarchy is not affected and the young King Peter comes to power only a few months earlier than had been planned.

Having reaffirmed their independence in this dramatic fashion, the Yugoslavs, to preserve it, may now have to fight the most formidable and ruthless war machine in all history. If so, they will fight, as their warlike history attests, fiercely and stubbornly; nor will they fight unaided. The door to Greece through Yugoslavia has been closed to Hitler and he can force an entrance only at great cost to himself and at the risk of exposing Germany to simultaneous war on two fronts.

Yet even more important than the immediate strategic implications of the revolution is the fact that the Yugoslavs have broken the hypnotic spell that Hitler has hitherto been able to exert on the Balkan nations. Until lately it seemed that under this spell they must march one by one into the maw of the Axis as the fascinated Bandar-log in the Jungle Book marched into the jaws of the python. The turn of events in Yugoslavia has done more than rejoice the Greeks and stiffen the courage of the Turks; it will have repercussions even in the occupied countries of Bulgaria and Rumania and perhaps elsewhere. Indeed, the Yugoslav revolution seems to mark a moral and psychological turning point fully as important to the outcome of the war as the military victories in Albania or those of the British in Africa.

Trial Blackout

Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee thinks the time has come to experiment with blackouts in Washington. This city, he says, offers a "natural target" for any unfriendly aircraft which might contrive to get into our neighborhood. He believes we should try something like a dress rehearsal of actual war conditions, with verisimilitude carried into almost every detail—sirens, searchlights, antiaircraft batteries and cruiser cars with loud speakers. Doubtless the loud speakers would be for the purpose of assuring the populace that a second Martian invasion was not under way.

It is interesting to observe that Representative Randolph's proposal comes at a time when many air-defense experts abroad have almost been persuaded that blackouts afford no protection commensurate with the disadvantages and difficulties they involve. Even in the blackest blackout, light cannot be dispensed with entirely. Moreover, a bomber pilot, once he gets into the general vicinity, has little difficulty in locating any city which, like Washington, is situated beside a broad river, since the water serves as a reflector which is visible at extremely high altitudes.

This is not to say that the problem of air-raid protection should not be the subject of most serious study, remote as the possibility of bombardment may now seem. But the study should be made, and we hope is being made, by specialists, and wholly on the basis of European experience to date.

TRIPLE PLATE

The Infinite's being so wide
Is the reason the Powers provide
For inner defense, my hide.
For next defense, outside

I make myself this time
Of wood, or granite, or lime
A wall too hard for crime
Either to breach or climb.

Then a number of us agree
On a national boundary.
And that defense makes three
Between too much and me.

No Gallery Charge

In reply to a letter signed by Carry C. Posfay, I wish to state that I, for one, would most certainly disapprove of the idea of charging 10 cents admission to the new National Art Gallery for the period of the duration of the war, regardless of how noble the cause might be.

Only recently have efforts been made by various people in authority to bring art down to the point where it can be within reach of every man and not, as has been pointed out, for the select few.

Why should we in any way discourage this noble and worthwhile effort by becoming mercenary at this crucial time? Art provides us with one means of escape from the reality of our everyday life, and one which is so vital to every American today.

Although a paltry dime may seem insignificant, it can nevertheless tend to create a barrier to just such people as art circles are most cordially inviting—the workingman.

Give this a thought for a moment and then possibly the idea suggested will, no doubt, lose some of its nobleness and the practicability of this intentionally constructive criticism will be better understood.

NEAL FRIZELL.

Air Patrol

The Navy should organize an Air Police Patrol, its duty to police training recruits. The accident in which a woman was decapitated makes the need of this unit obvious. Human beings in isolated sections offer a tempting urge for machine-gun practice. An inexperienced pilot swoops too low and injures someone. He may be trained, but has not enough experience in handling his plane.

According to reports, it is not the first time this maneuver has been tried unofficially; luckily nothing has previously happened. But this time something did happen. There's no telling when it might be tried again. You send a young kid in the air, and there's no telling what he will do. I know, because I've been in the air.

The patrol would make it impossible for this type of accident to recur.

Lunch-Hour Smoking

There is a bottleneck in Washington of which nothing has as yet been said. With the considerable increase of Federal employes, the eating establishments in the Government buildings and outside have been frightfully taxed. The managements have not yet given the matter much thought, since my survey showed that the only thing they have been able to produce was a sign asking the people to have their change ready, to think of their fellow workers, and to expedite the eating period. The result, of course, is far from satisfactory.

One of the contributing factors to remove this bottleneck and save the Nation untold hours of work which are now lost owing to the inability of people getting their lunches quickly is smoking. As long as men were the only smokers, it was only partly bad. Since the majority of employes in certain departments are women, and with all of them smoking before, during and after lunch, it is obvious that their colleagues must march around the cafeteria with their plates and trays while the inconsiderate ones sit and smoke. Therefore, to remove this nuisance, a strict rule of "no smoking" should be at once instituted and most rigidly enforced. The luncheon period could be expedited by at least one-third of the time.

Opposes "Stand-Up" Bars

The Post says, "D. C. Favors Standing at Bars . . ." The article states that proposed legislation to permit standing at bars has won the approval of the District Commissioners.

The waiters and waitresses of this city, who are directly affected by this problem and who because of the nature of their work are especially well qualified to voice their opinions in this matter, have not been given the opportunity to be heard on this subject. I believe the Commissioners owe a duty to the public to give us an opportunity to present our expert opinion.

Owners of establishments which serve liquor claim that they favor a change in the law because they are unable at the present time to tell whether a person seated at a table has had too many drinks. The truth of the matter is that they want a change in the law because they are worried about seeing the law enforced. Waiters and waitresses are always on the alert and refuse to take orders from guests who have already had enough drinks. They have done this even at the risk of being fired by some of the owners of establishments who are loudest in their cries to change the law.

It should be remembered that the prohibition law was repealed because it was promised that employment opportunities would be provided numerous workers and that the evils of the old corner saloon would be abolished. If the standing-up bar is adopted in the District, hundreds of waiters and waitresses will be added to the unemployment rolls and we will soon see the return of the old corner saloon.

Are we willing for the sake of greater profits for some selfish businessmen to throw hundreds of people out of work and go back to the drink-brawl days of old corner saloons? The waiters and waitresses of this city say, "no!" We believe the answer of the general public is the same as ours.

A. F. Of L. Publicity Director Replies To Pegler

I don't have to go to London. I've been "blitzed" right here. Westbrook Pegler devoted his whole column to me yesterday.

As I emerged from my bomb shelter this morning and cleared away the duds, littering my front yard, I felt like Czecho-Slovakia. I couldn't figure out why Pegler had picked on me. And then I remembered a piece I had written about Pegler which was published in the labor press about two weeks ago.

It was rather a mild piece. I just said Pegler was a clown, that he should have stuck to sports writing, that he had been led astray into deep waters of labor and national politics by his boss, Roy Howard. And then I said some things about Mr. Howard, head of the Scripps-Howard newspaper chain. What of it? Pegler has said some things about my boss, William Green. He doesn't like Mr. Green. I don't like Mr. Howard. This is still a free country.

Evidently, Pegler can dish it out, but he can't take it. The little arrows I shot into the air must have gotten under his skin. For he postponed his vacation a whole week to engineer yesterday's retaliatory raid. In it he denounced me (for the first time), the labor press (the fifth time) and the A. F. of L. (the thousandth time). Pegler is no longer a reporter. He's a repeater. Propagandists are prone to repeat themselves. They fall in love with their own stuff.

What has Pegler got against me? He says I get a good salary (sheer libel) and that I don't earn it. In the same breath he says my job is one of the most difficult in the United States today. But he insists I do it wrong. He thinks I ought to persuade the A. F. of L. to pin a medal on his breast, kiss him on both cheeks and publicly resolve to do as Pegler says in the future. He compares me with the late Ivy Lee as a public relations counsel and he finds I don't measure up to that outstanding appeaser of the press.

When I had read all of this I came to the conclusion that Pegler was seeing things again. I do not work for John D. Rockefeller. My employer is the American Federation of Labor. My job is not that of public relations counsel. The A. F. of L. has no such animal on its pay roll. Its decisions are reached by delegates representing its 5,000,000 members at annual conventions. Between conventions, the Executive Council formulates policy. The members of this council feel quite capable of doing their job themselves without hiring outside advisers.

My job is simply to make available to the press factual information regarding the A. F. of L.'s activities. During the four years I have been on this job, I had but one opportunity of presenting such facts directly to Pegler. That was on last May 15, when Pegler for the first (and only) time showed up at a press conference held by Mr. Green at the conclusion of an Executive Council meeting. Pegler was admitted with the newspapermen to the conference but displayed little interest in it. Finally, this colloquy took place:

Mr. Green—I understand our friend and comrade, Mr. Westbrook Pegler, is here with us today. Is that right?

Mr. Pegler—That's right.

Mr. Green—We are very glad to have you here with us.

Mr. Pegler—That's mutual.

Mr. Green—Do you have any questions to ask?

Mr. Pegler—No. I just came to attend the press conference.

Mr. Green—There are several members of the Executive Council present. Perhaps they would like to ask you some questions. Would you mind answering them?

Mr. Pegler—No, I'll do my talking in print, not from the witness stand.

That ended the conversation and the press conference. Mr. Pegler stepped up to Mr. Green, shook hands with him and said he was very glad to meet him. Then he said goodbye.

It might be pointed out that when Pegler "talks" in print, his column is published in a hundred or more newspapers and the conversation is entirely one-sided. Perhaps that is why Pegler prefers to talk and throw his weight around in print.

In recalling this incident, I can think of only one slip I might have made in fulfilling the duties of my job and pleasing Pegler. I might have barred him from the press conference. That would have given him material for several more pleasant essays and made him my friend for life.

The Post Impressionist

The Anthropologist

When I was younger, I used to dream sometimes of the day when I would explore the darker corners of darkest Africa. Returning home after a Tarzan movie or some such spine-tingling drama, I would become a one-man safari and trek off to a little clump of trees nearby. There, for hours on end, I would hunt lions and tigers and fight bands of savage cannibals until supper-time.

That tiny patch of trees near my home was the closest I ever came to Africa; but as for the cannibals, I met them some years later, and in a unique fashion, if less fanciful than my dreams.

A carnival had come to town and I had managed to land a job with the show collecting tickets after school. In return for my labor I was to receive free passes to all of the concessions.

How well I remember that first night: Free passes in my pocket; sawdust in my shoes, and a tingling exhilaration mingling with the popcorn in my stomach, as I meandered along the midway, mentally debating what to see first.

Then somewhere close at hand I heard the reverberations of a tom-tom pulsating through the cacophony of barkers' shrill cries, high-piping of the calliope and heterogeneous hubbub of the fun-seeking crowd. My explorer's blood was aroused. Africa beckoned. I turned my steps in the direction of the sound and hurried a little, expectantly.

A crowd shifted, I discovered with chagrin that the noise was coming from an unshaven individual in shirt sleeves who was sitting on a soap box pounding a drum, his face a mask of utter boredom. On the platform behind the drummer was a skinny little man in khaki shorts, a pistol on his hip and two bandoliers draped over his scrawny shoulders. He was pacing nervously back and forth before a wall of bamboo on which were hung several moldy-looking lion skins. Over all hung a garish sign proclaiming the concession as "Congo Village."

Despite the barker's diminutive size, his voice rang out over the crowd with a stentorian quality, as he harangued the crowd:

"All right folks step in closer . . . step right up . . . this is Congo Village . . . oh, ho! oh, ho! Step up . . . step up . . . see with your own eyes cannibals from darkest Africa . . . pin-headed savages from the Belgian Congo . . . jungle man-eaters . . . from the Gold Coast . . . where the jungle is so thick you can walk for days and never see the sun . . . they're fierce . . . they're untamed . . . so step up . . . step right up."

I had heard enough and was already stepping up, anxious to see cannibals in the flesh. Across the center of the tent ran a barrier dividing the cannibals from the people or, perhaps, vice versa. A bleary-eyed man in a nondescript band uniform sat on a high stool off to one side, holding in his lap an ancient musket that surely had seen service against the Indians.

But whatever doubts I had as to the cannibals' authenticity was immediately dispelled when I gazed over the barrier. I was appalled. For there, chained to stakes driven in the ground, squatting on filthy grass mats in front of bamboo cages, were three fierce and horrible looking creatures.

Their powerful bodies were daubed with white paint which added to their heathenish looks. From time to time one of them would mumble, in an unintelligible lingo to the other, who in turn would growl and show the whites of his eyes.

It was revolting, yet somehow fascinating to watch their antics. Hanging on the barrier, gazing at them, it occurred to me how inhuman it was to keep men chained up in cages like that. The thought took root and flourished. Why these men couldn't even speak English; probably they received no salary; and doubtless—I was sure of this—they were whipped frequently.

Something must be done about such a state of affairs—but what? Surely there must be some sort of law against this business. The thought burst into full flower. I would help them out of their predicament!

The following morning I arrived on the grounds long before the show was to begin. First, I had determined to do some private investigating; find out how they were treated; how they were fed, etc. I would then have concrete evidence to work on.

I approached Congo Village carefully, zigzagging my way behind the wagons and tents. No one paid any attention to me. Reaching my destination I paused. All was quiet. Up to the entrance I tiptoed and silently placed my eye against an opening in the canvas.

I held my breath. Sure enough the cannibals were inside, huddled in a small group in the dim light, gesturing and conversing in guttural tones among themselves. Some sort of tribal ceremony I deduced.

Then, from the murky interior came the voice of the pin-headed savage from darkest Africa, as he called out in a soft Alabama drawl for Mumbo Jumbo to fade his nickel.

"Shoot, you're faded." I said stepping through the door, not only to lose my nickel, but my role as emancipator to the poor benighted cannibals as well.

"The Master Of Them That Know"

IT HAS BEEN the convention to speak of Plato and Aristotle as though they stood somehow at opposite poles of the mind, like poetry and science, or genius and common sense. Coleridge divided mankind into congenital Platonists and Aristotelians with as much assurance as Macaulay afterward divided them into congenital tories and liberals. "The soul of Aristotle," said Coleridge, "shall become one with the soul of Plato when the men of talent have all entered into men of genius or when the men of genius have all sunk into men of talent."

LALLEY

To be sure this is the dualism of Quixote and Sancho Panza rather than of Ormazd and Ahriman. But we still insist on taking sides, despite the efforts of Prof. Werner Jaeger and others to prove that Aristotelianism is more a development of Platonism than a departure from it. Perhaps the secret of the supposed antagonism is that we know the thought of the poetical Plato wholly through his literary work and that of the scientific Aristotle largely through his technical treatises.

At any rate these two great names are inseparable, and Mr. Bennett Cerf has appropriately complemented the admirable Random House edition of Jowett's translation of the Platonic Dialogues with the equally admirable one-volume edition of Aristotle's treatises which makes its appearance today. Thus the body of Aristotelian philosophy, as far as we have it, is brought for the first time in English to the ordinary reader.

THE VOLUME, which has something less than 1,500 pages, has been adapted by Dr. Richard McKeon, of the University of Chicago, from the Oxford series of translations recently completed under the editorship of J. A. Smith and W. D. Ross. Dr. McKeon has managed to include all the major works in their entirety —the Categories, the Posterior Analytics, the Physics, the Metaphysics, the Politics, the Poetics and the treatises On Generation and Corruption, On Memory and On Sleep and the Divination of Dreams. There are abridged versions of the Prior Analytics, the Topics, the Rhetoric, and of the works On Sophistical Refutations, On the Heavens, On the History of Animals, and On the Parts of Animals. The Meteorology and the treatises on the Progression of Animals and On the Constitution of Athens have been omitted. So has the Eudemian Ethics, no longer considered an authentic work. The traditional arrangement grouping has been followed, beginning, of course, with the Organon, or logical works.

Aristotle is supposed to have shared with Plato the idea that philosophy can properly be taught only by word of mouth. All these works, then, would come under the head of lectures, or perhaps mere memoranda of lectures or conversations during the famous walks in the groves of the Lyceum. They were, almost certainly, never intended, as were the now lost Dialogues, for the generality of readers. Indeed, if we can trust Plutarch, Aristotle was once rebuked by his royal pupil, Alexander, for having published the trade secrets of philosophy at all.

PROF. JAEGER has observed that we know just enough about the personality of Aristotle to realize that we can never know very much about it. What manner of man, anyhow, was this ancient who is believed to have possessed the finest head that ever sat on mortal shoulders? We cannot even be sure how he looked, for one guess is almost as good as another as to which, if any, of the various statues and busts that are given his name is really a portrait, though Dr. McKeon seems reasonably satisfied with one in Vienna and uses it as a frontispiece.

Tradition of the classical world spoke of Aristotle as spare and spindling, mincing of gait, foppish of dress, vain and effeminate of manner. But this scarcely sounds like a portrait by an unprejudiced hand. Prof. Catlin, of Cornell, suggests that, since even philosophers are often human, we can look for something approximating a self-portrait in the sketch of the "man of personality" in the Nicomachean Ethics. It is the portrait of proud man, agreeable enough to inferiors but standoffish with powerful and great, truthful to the point of tactlessness, making no effort to conceal either sympathies or aversions, impervious to either flattery or malice. In all this Prof. Catlin perceives something of "the T. E. Lawrence-Lindbergh type," the sort of fellow much admired by the Renaissance world but none too popular in our own.

THE BIG MYSTERY about Aristotle is how such a man could have been persuaded to take a job as a mere private tutor at a half-barbarian court. The fact that his father had once been court physician scarcely explains it. One cannot help supposing that the reason was not sentimental but political, though of course in the higher and nobler sense of the word.

Can it have been that Aristotle was attempting to ride the Wave of the Future? His friend and father-in-law, Hermias, was neck deep in Macedonian politics. By temperament, Aristotle might well have been inclined to what we call nowadays "the realistic viewpoint." He might have regarded the impending new order in Hellas and Asia as inevitable. This would be compatible enough with the teleological theory of history expounded in the Politics.

Moreover, the 20 years that Aristotle spent with Plato in the Athenian Academy were the years after Plato's fiasco at Syracuse—the period, that is, between the Republic and the Laws. Aristotle must have pondered a great deal about Plato's political failure, and, conceivably, he might have got the notion that, though it was evidently not possible to make the philosopher a king, there remained the possibility of making the king a philosopher. And if the king-philosopher ruled all Hellas, so much the better for all the Hellenes. As for the barbarians, were they not by nature intended to be ruled by Hellenes? After all, Aristotle was not an Athenian, and Prof. Jaeger thinks the Ionians were capable of taking the world view.

But in any event Aristotle's failure with Alexander was as great as and as tragic as Plato's with Dion. A few years in the Asiatic climate undid all the patient tutelage in Macedonia. Presently the king-philosopher was throwing spears at his favorites and suggesting to his messmates that they worship him as a god. One of them, Aristotle's nephew, Callisthenes, came to grief by refusing.

ARISTOTLE never displaced Plato in the thought of either the Hellenistic or the Roman world. The fascination he had for the medieval mind is curious and not easy to explain. Partly, it may have been that in his logical system they found the very mechanism they needed for their own speculations. And after the Crusades had brought his other works back to the West, the schoolmen were dazzled by the encyclopedic range of his mind. For them he became the philosopher, par excellence, to whom all arguments could be appealed and whose authority was infallible.

Not all the schoolmen, however, were doting Aristotelians. In theology, St. Bonaventura and the early Franciscan school held to the Platonism of the Fathers, and especially of St. Augustine. Even in St. Thomas Aquinas, the "Christian Aristotle," Platonic influences are many, since his work was to harmonize the new Aristotelianism with the Fathers and the Scriptures. And Platonism lingered in the monasteries after Aristotle's domination of the schools.

Aristotelianism went into discard with the great sixteenth century reaction against scholasticism but not before it had permanently shaped the habits of European thought. It has never regained its ascendancy and science has for the most part ignored its debt to this first and greatest of scientists.

ARE WE DUE at long last for an Aristotelian revival? The present bankruptcy of idealism and positivism alike seems to suggest the possibility. And at any rate the notion of Aristotelianism as a static rather than a dynamic philosophy has now been exploded.

Or is Aristotle, the classic exponent of "bourgeois common sense," destined to perish with bourgeois society? Or is all society about to illustrate the theory advanced in the Politics that philosophy and all other arts of civilization, once having achieved their perfection of "form," must decay, disappear, be forgotten by man and ultimately rediscovered?

Law Upholds U. S. on Aid

Jackson's Opinion

Special Dispatch to The Post

Havana, Cuba, March 27.—United States Attorney General Robert H. Jackson, asserting that international law is on the side of American aid to Great Britain, declared here today that Germany, Italy and Japan have "violated a right and affected the interests of the United States" by going to war in violation of the Kellogg-Briand Pact of 1928 to outlaw war.

The United States consequently is within its rights, Jackson stated, in asserting "a right of discriminatory action" against the Axis nations.

The Attorney General, who wrote the legal opinion approving the American trade of 50 destroyers for British military bases last September, sketched a new official American view of the international law on neutrality.

Jackson, a guest on President Roosevelt's yacht, was unable to reach Havana to deliver the speech in person, due to rough weather. It was read for him to the first conference of the Inter-American Bar Association by United States Ambassador to Cuba George S. Messersmith.

THE BASES of American foreign policy, he said, are "to extend England all aid 'short of war'" and "to avoid entry into the war as a belligerent."

Old rules of neutrality, embodied in the Hague Conventions, which require that neutral nations keep "hands off" any war in which they are not fighting, have been rejected as based on "fictions," Jackson said.

Signing of the Kellogg-Briand Pact in Paris in 1928, which outlaws war as "an instrument of national policy" created a new concept of international law, he said, under which the notion is rejected that "all wars are legal and all wars must be regarded as just."

"The present hostilities are the result of and have been accompanied by repeated violations of the treaty by Germany, Italy and Japan," said Jackson.

The Kellogg-Briand Pact gives the United States the right to discriminate between "good" and "bad" wars, to make moral judgments, and to decide who is the aggressor and then to help the victim, he asserted.

INTELLIGENT public opinion of the world which is not afraid to be vocal and the action of the American States have made a determination," said the Cabinet member, "that the Axis powers are the aggressors in the wars today, which is an appropriate basis in the present state of international organization for our policy."

"The principle of self-defense may most properly be invoked," said Jackson, declaring in explanation:

"There can be no doubt that the political, territorial, economic and cultural integrity of the Western Hemisphere is menaced by totalitarian activities now going on outside this hemisphere."

Explaining the reasons for American "short of war" measures, Jackson said that "a public opinion which can express itself only in sermons is not likely to restrain the aggressive propensities of any powerful state."

"Short of war measures which enlightened opinion may invoke," he continued, "include all forms of moral censure nad diplomatic disapproval, discriminatory embargoes and boycotts, as well as financial credits and furnishings of moral censure and diplomatic and ships. These speak a language understandable to those deaf to the precepts alike of Christian civilization and of legal obligation and scholarship."

Jackson cited as precedents for this concept of "partial neutrality" the action of several South American republics during the World War, after the United States entered the conflict, of announcing a departure from strict neutrality, in favor of the United States.

Funds for Canal Included in Bill Passed by House

The House passed and sent to the Senate yesterday a $300,272,228 appropriation bill which includes $131,135,326 for the Panama Canal.

The measure would provide funds for the War Department's "civil functions," such as rivers and harbors and flood control.

The canal item includes $34,932,000 cash and $79,000,000 contractual authority for a third set of locks there, and $17,203,326 for maintenance and functions.

Pyramid Of Agencies

By Ernest K. Lindley

An Over-All Defense Set-Up

AN ADMINISTRATIVE framework for the whole national defense effort has been worked out at last and, on the President's return to Washington, can be expected to take on flesh and color. On paper, the plan makes sense and holds the promise of clearing away much of the confusion that has attended the administration of the defense program during the last nine months.

At the top of the pyramid is the Office of Emergency Management, attached directly to the White House itself. This office has already been partly manned with personnel, fiscal, and other housekeeping officers. Whether it will have a head, other than the President himself, remains undecided. It is a position which Harry Hopkins might fill if he were well enough to stand the punishment. But he is not. And it is doubtful whether anyone else would be acceptable either to the President or to other national defense officials — although Associate Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas and Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York have been mentioned in New Deal circles as possibilities for the post.

LINDLEY

THE PROBABILITY is that OEM will be a service and reporting agency for the White House, without a policy-making head other than the President.

Below OEM, on paper, will be the key defense agencies.

The first of these, and the only one now in full operation, is the Office of Production Management, headed by Knudsen and Hillman.

On a parity with OPM, according to the present plan, will be a price-adjustment administration under Leon Henderson. This office would watch and attempt to control in various ways the economic effects of the defense effort, especially in the field of prices. It would absorb the consumer-protection activities of the old NDAC division now headed by Miss Harriett Elliott.

On the same plane with OPM and Henderson's agency would be the lend-lease administration. This will be handled by Harry Hopkins, with the aid of a small central staff, attached probably to OEM. Maj. Gen. James H. Burns, executive assistant to the Assistant Secretary of War, has been assigned to Hopkins as his chief assistant, and already has begun work. In addition, the War and Navy Departments will each have small committees to clear material for export—and there will be connecting links also with the Maritime Commission, the Department of Agriculture and other agencies.

THE SO-CALLED War Cabinet —Secretaries Hull, Morgenthau, Stimson and Knox—is assisting in determining the initial policies regarding the administration of the Lend-Lease Act. But the President has not given this War Cabinet permanent status. His previous experience with Cabinet committees has not been altogether happy. It is a good guess that this committee will not long operate as such, and that the Lend-Lease Act will be administered by the President through Hopkins, with such individual contacts with members and heads of special defense agencies as may be necessary.

An initial master agreement concerning lend-lease arrangements probably will be worked out with the British. After that there probably will be subsidiary agreements for each large transaction. Some of these may be three or four-cornered agreements, since at times we ask payment in the form of raw materials from British dominions or colonies, or from the Netherlands East Indies.

Ships, both naval and merchant, may be leased or lent—to be returned at the conclusion of the war if they are still afloat—while ammunition may be given in return for promises of future deliveries of raw materials. Many variations are possible.

A FOURTH AGENCY under OPM probably will be an office or council of economic defense This will be concerned with such things as the control of exports, preemptive buying of raw materials in neutral countries to prevent their purchase by the Axis or Japan, and the regulation of foreign balances here and in friendly countries.

Measures of economic war, or defense, have been floundering for months in interdepartmental disputes. And the situation does not seem to be much better on the British side. For example, when we stopped subsidizing the export of wheat to Japan, the Australians jumped in to supply the demand. The need for a central group to control economic defense is recognized on all sides.

A fifth key agency will organize civilian defense on the home front. Competing plans have been going into the White House for many weeks. Before going on vacation the President put the whole problem in fresh hands: those of William C. Bullitt, former Ambassador to France, and Wayne Coy, former Assistant Federal Security administrator. They are to present a recommendation immediately on his return.

If other agencies are needed they can be added, as equals or subsidiaries of the five main ones grouped under OEM. But the framework sketched above covers the main defense activities now in view. And, on paper at least, it is refreshingly simple.

Petroleum Industry Ready In Crisis, House Told

By the Associated Press

A Government expert reported yesterday that with one possible exception all branches of the oil industry were capable of meeting requirements of any defense program "or possible war situations."

Robert Wilson, petroleum consultant of the Office of Production Management, made the statement to a House Interstate Commerce subcommittee, along with a report that military and industrial activities of Germany and Italy were being conducted with petroleum and synthetic products equal to only 5 per cent of United States production.

Wilson estimated that 1941 peacetime demands for crude would be 8 or 9 per cent greater than last year and that "an all-out war effort" would increase needs by another 5 or 10 per cent.

Shipping Problem

Production facilities are adequate and refining is in almost as good shape, Wilson said. Of transportation, he said:

"The only possible bottleneck which gives us concern is in tanker transportation to the East Coast. About 95 per cent of the petroleum products consumed by the East Coast States is delivered there by tanker and mainly from the Gulf Coast."

The tanker fleet for that transportation normally is adequate, Wilson reported, but many ships are too old and many have been transferred to the Navy and into foreign service.

The situation could be much improved by construction of a private pipeline along the Southeastern Coast of the United States. Then, commenting on failure of the Georgia Legislature to enact legislation which would make such a line possible across that State, Wilson added:

"It is difficult to understand the unwillingness of the Georgia Legislature to pass the necessary legislation in view of the recent united recommendations of the President and the Secretaries of War, Navy and the Interior, but it would seem that it must be based on a lack of appreciation of the seriousness of the situation."

Wilson Recalled

Wilson was recalled later in the day to talk about the entire field of oil in national defense behind closed doors.

Chairman Cole (Democrat), of Maryland, called the hearings in response to letters from President Roosevelt suggesting that Federal legislation was necessary in view of the Southeast Coast situation and proposing that the subcommittee, established more than six years ago, survey the national defense problem in connection with crude.

Army and Navy witnesses will be heard tomorrow, along with representatives of an interstate compact commission.

U. of Va. Professor Wins $500 Prize Given by Harvard

Cambridge, Mass., March 27 (AP).—Harvard University announced today that Dr. David McCord Wright, assistant professor of economics and commercial law at the University of Virginia, had won this year's David A. Wells prize of 500.

The prize is given for outstanding original research in economics by Harvard students or recent graduates. Dr. Wright's research was on "The Creation of Purchasing Power," the title of a thesis he submitted for his Harvard Ph. D. degree, obtained in 1940.

Self-Delusion

WE GO ALONG for years using labels and trade-marks, instead of opinions, regarding men and matters, and we revise or erase them only when some development jolts us into a realization that we have carelessly accepted the false estimates of others.

We have been told that Senator Bob Wagner, of New York, is a great and noble liberal statesman and that the Wagner Act is labor's Magna Charta, and we have lazily believed all this, when the truth is that Wagner is just a tenacious personal politician whose name was attached to a composite work for parliamentary purposes and thus received individual credit, which he has not failed to exploit, for something which was a development rather than the inspired work of any individual.

We have been told that the Wagner Act is labor's Magna Charta, and it took most of us years to venture to examine this document for its pernicious provisions, including one which subtly revokes the right of otherwise free men to honest employment unless they place themselves under the government of private organizations having private taxing powers and private courts subject to no control by the public government.

THAT IS THE real substance of the act on the basis of which Senator Wagner has been ballyhooed as a great, redoubtable friend of the friendless worker. He is not known ever to have addressed his fine, courageous political honesty to the known fact that many of the unions to which he helped to give this power are governed by racketeers and time-honored grafters of the union movement and others by unmistakable agents of the Muscovite. Should this fine, upstanding friend of the worker ever make public admission of these facts, all well known to him, he would sacrifice the false adulation of the professional unioneers who put him on his pedestal, and we get the real measure of his nobility only when we divide his reputation by his silence on these points.

Mrs. Mary Norton of New Jersey is a political creature of the Hague organization, the very name of which conjures a picture of political sordidness, and she represents in Congress a region in which labor racketeering is at its very worst in close cooperation with the Hague mob. Yet Mrs. Norton has been given a reputation as a wise, progressive and valiant fighter for the rights of the working people by thoughtless thousands who could not, to save their lives, name a single act of hers to justify this appraisal.

But, as a current reminder of the fallacy of some such reputations, I cite you the letter written to William Green, the president of the American Federation of Labor, by the venerable Senator Norris, of Nebraska, in which that living monument of greatness insulted the honesty and intelligence of the public by attempting to minimize extortion by the unions of the A. F. of L. while protesting against it.

IT IS NO pleasure to catch Senator Norris in such flagrant offense against the obvious facts, for he is one who has shown bravery under terrible pressure, and it may be said in extenuation that his judgment has lost a contest with his sympathies and his traditional policies.

Nevertheless, this old warrior felt himself moved to chide Green slightly, but, in so doing, was at pains, throughout his letter, to say that only "some" of the complaints were true, that "many of these reports are exaggerated" and that some of them were "utterly untrue," when the plain truth is, as Norris should know, since he presumes to pass judgment, that this vicious racket has run wild wherever grafting locals snatch money from American workers and has been waived only in districts where the people were of a temper to take direct action against such masters of the shakedown as elsewhere robbed less gumptious men.

Adding these reputations for onward liberalism to the ballyhoo for labor's Magna Charta, we arrive at a pathetic total of popular self-delusion by a people who think that they are smart.

Integration Needed

Corned Beef And Lend-Lease

THE UNITED STATES cannot have one policy toward Europe, another toward the Far East and a third toward Latin America.

NOVER

That was possible in the past when, at one and the same time, we could without danger remain determinedly aloof from Europe, pursue an active diplomatic and even imperialistic course in the Far East and toy, dilettante fashion, with the century-old ideal of hemispheric unity in the Americas. It is not possible any longer.

The menace we face is a menace of world dimensions. Yosuke Matsuoka conferring with Hitler in Berlin on ways and means of coordinating German - Japanese strategy so as to deal a knock-out blow to the democracies suggests the extent of the threat with which we must successfully grapple if it is not to destroy us.

IT IS BECAUSE the American Government and people realize the desperate urgency of the situation that they gave their support to the lease-lend bill; that is why their representatives in Congress overwhelmingly approved an appropriation of $7,000,000,000 with which to implement that measure. It is for precisely the same reason that the largest part of the American fleet is being kept in Pacific waters.

Yet even under the impact of an emergency greater than this Nation has ever before confronted, old ways of thought and action die hard. This was borne out by the curious circumstance that while the Senate voted 67 to 9 in favor of the $7,000,000,000 aid bill a proposal to lift the ban on the Navy's purchase of imported foods, which would mean principally canned Argentine beef, barely squeezed through the Senate and still faces a formidable barrage of opposition in the House.

THIS OBVIOUSLY does not make sense. The menace of Hitlerism in South America is very real and very pressing. That menace is in part the product of propaganda which this Nation is trying to meet and is meeting, on the whole, successfully, through a program of mutual understanding. But the real danger which faces us in the southern continent is not ideologic, but economic.

The war has seriously disrupted the economic ties between South American nations and Europe. It has cut off valuable markets, burdened the producers with unwanted surpluses, played havoc with the exchanges. The other republics of the Americas are proud of their independence. They want to maintain it. They have shown their willingness to join with us in tightening the bonds of hemispheric solidarity and thus enable the Americas to resist foreign domination with that strength which is the product of unity. Steps in that direction were taken at the conferences held in Montevideo, Buenos Aires, Lima, Panama and Havana. But pacts and agreements and invocations to friendship and good-will missions, and even defense arrangements, are not enough. Nor will they be enough unless and until the economic plight of the nations to our south is eased.

THE GOVERNMENT has not bee nunaware of this problem and has taken various constructive measures to solve it. But the fact that so large a number of Senators who were willing to have the Government spend $7,000,000,000 to aid Great Britain and Greece and China were unwilling to permit the Navy to buy a negligible quantity of Argentine beef shows how lacking in integration is our political thinking regarding the situation in this hemisphere and our economic thinking with respect to it. On the political side one sees a definite grasp of realities. On the economic side, parochialism is still far too much the order of the day.

Argentina will not be spared Nazi penetration solely by having the Government buy a few thousand or a few hundred thousand dollars worth of canned corned beef for our sailors and marines. But it is clear that had the Senate voted to keep the ban on such purchases, as it came perilously close to doing through a fluke situation, every Nazi agent in Latin America would have had a great talking point with which to hammer home the thesis that the vaunted good neighbor policy of the United States is just so much sound and fury signifying nothing.

THE DANGER was averted. But it brings home the necessity of a reexamination of our trade policy with Latin America so as to bring it in line with our needs and their needs and fit it in as well with the great program of giving every possible assistance to those menaced by the aggressors. Not to let the left hand know or care what the right hand is doing can easily lead to disaster. If Latin America is to keep its head above the water economically—and only in that way can it successfully fight the inroads of Hitlerism—American assistance will be needed. Loans are not enough. They are only palliatives. What is needed is bold and constructive economic statesmanship of the kind which this country is now in a position to apply. But the Administration will get nowhere unless it has the backing of Congress and a public opinion fully aware of the realities and ready to act on them.

Ann Wickard Reveals Vitamin-Laden Recipes

By Martha Ellyn
The Post Food Editor.

ANN WICKARD, a freshman in the School of Home Economics, Purdue University, is following in the footsteps of her father, Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard, in the keen interest she takes in up-to-the-minute news about food and the importance it plays in our lives and for national defense. Ann arrived home a few days ago from college to spend the spring vacation with her parents.

Martha Ellyn

Mr. and Mrs. Wickard and daughters, Betty and Ann, are all rugged individuals, in that the busy lives they live don't weary them in the least. I remarked about their "fitness," and in one word Ann disclosed the family secret for maintaining perennial freshness. VITAMINS. Ann says that boxes of vitamins crowd her mail box at the University, show up at their dinner table, make their appearance while guests are being entertained in their home, and she surmises that her father may keep a vial of vitamin tablets under his pillow at night. I noted at a party of the Wickards last Sunday that the Secretary was holding fast to a vial of vitamin tablets during most of the evening.

So it follows that the announcement of Enriched Flour has been received with great interest and enthusiasm in the Wickard household. Secretary Wickard tells that this flour will make a real contribution to raising the nutritional status of the American people because it has a higher vitamin and mineral content than ordinary white flour. Besides benefiting the health of the Nation, agriculture will be benefited by increasing the proper utilization of one of our most economical foodstuffs. Mr. Wickard, of course, is interested in the consumption of wheat.

Extra Nutritions

This new flour is simply the same good wheat flour we have always had, except that it is extra-nutritious. In addition to providing excellent energy-yielding carbohydrates and useful protein, enriched flour provides thiamin (vitamin B1), nicotinic acid (the pellagra-preventing vitamin) and iron.

Thiamin is the vitamin our British friends call B1. It protects the health of the nerves; it is essential to growth; it is important in maintaining appetite, and it is necessary for the body's utilization of carbohydrates. If any adult eats at least two slices of bread or two biscuits or muffins at each meal he will be getting a considerable part of the thiamin he needs each day. He can make up the rest from meats, eggs, vegetables, milk, cheese and the many other good foods that are so delicious with all kinds of breads and that make a well-balanced diet.

Nicotinic acid is another member of the B-vitamin family. Because it is the one which prevents pellagra, it was called the P-P factor until its identity became known. Although the body needs many minerals, iron is the one most frequently lacking in American dietaries. Since wheat naturally contains some iron, it seems advisable to add nutritional iron to flour. Each pound of Enriched Flour contains at least 6.15 milligrams of iron. Adults need about 15 milligrams daily. Bread, biscuits and other baked products made with Enriched Flour will thus contribute a good share of the day s quota of iron.

Biscuit Par Excellence

Ann Wickard, mindful of her father's interest in vitamins and wheat, decided to show him that her home economics course at Purdue, although still in its infancy, had shown her the way to delightful hot biscuits. She made them with Enriched Flour and her dad pronounced them "excellent." Here is the recipe Ann used:

Enriched Flour Biscuits—Sift together 2 cups enriched wheat flour, ¾ teaspoon salt and 3 teaspoons baking powder. Cut or rub in 2 to 4 tablespoons shortening. Add 2-3 to ¾ cups milk to make a soft dough, stirring just enough to make ingredients hold together. Turn out on lightly floured board, knead gently for a half minute. Roll or pat out to desired thickness. Cut into desired shape. Bake in hot oven, 450 degrees, 10 to 12 minutes. Yield: About 18 two-inch biscuits.

A Vote for Beef

But Ann is learning other things in her home economics course than how to bake biscuits. She has studied about fruits, cereals, dairy products, eggs, vegetables and before she left on her vacation, she was studying about meats. This is a subject close to Ann's heart, for she loves any cut of beef, but says she is especially fond of fillet mignon with mushrooms.

I asked Ann if she knew from what part of the beef the fillet is obtained, and she answered that it came from the under side of the loin of beef, the tenderloin. And here is the recipe she gave me for cooking Fllet Mignon with Mushrooms.

Fillet Mignon—Remove skin and fat with a sharp knife from the fillet. Also every shred of muscle and ligament must be removed. If the fillet is not then of a good, round shape, skewer it until it is so.

The fillet may be spread on both sides with a mixture of butter, mustard, Worcestershire, garlic and fine herbs, if desired, or may be broiled with a rubbing of soft butter. If fillet is 1-inch thick, broil for 5 minutes on one side, turn and broil 10 minutes on the other side. Turn again and broil 5 minutes longer, making 20 minutes broiling. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Serve with broiled mushrooms.

Fried Asparagus Tips

Asparagus tips are a favorite ingredient for salads and served with butter sauce. They are also delicious when fried. Drain the asparagus tips. Dip them in 1 egg beaten and diluted with 2 tablespoons butter. Roll the tips in flour that has been slightly salted. Dip them again in the egg mixture. Fry them in deep fat. Drain on absorbent paper and serve very hot.

Partners in Health

"Take a biscuit and butter it while it is hot, Dad," says Ann Wickard proudly to her father, the Secretary of Agriculture, shown above. The biscuits made of the new Enriched Flour, which is made extra-nutritious by the addition of vitamins and minerals, were a success—as is told by the happy smile Mr. Wickard is wearing while sampling them

Cook's Library

By MARTHA ELLYN

CARVING THE EASY WAY, by Lily Haxworth Wallace, is an illustrated handbook on the carving and serving of meats, poultry and fish, with a section on garnishes and accompaniments. A chapter is also devoted to the foods to serve with meats, poultry and fish. An example of the author's suggestions is: With roast beef, serve scraped fresh horseradish or English mustard, Yorkshire pudding or Franconia potatoes as the starchy vegetables, and spinach, corn, brussels sprouts, green beans, stuffed peppers or tomatoes for the green vegetable.

There are instructions on the selection and care of carving tools and equipment as well as the preparation and serving of foods. Clear diagrams and plentiful illustrations depict the position of the fork and knife, the direction of the slice and other details.

Kitchen carving instructions are given and the preparation of the platter for the meat, as well as the more dramatic efforts of the male of the household when presiding at the dinner table.

Since good carving is an accomplishment which adds much to the pleasure of dining, it is essential that the one who is responsible for the carving know how to go about it. This book would make an acceptable gift for a bride's shower, and will certainly be appreciated by the groom as well as the bride.

The publisher is M. Barrows and Co. Price $1.00.

LET'S MAKE A GIFT—Ruth Wyeth Spears is the author of this book telling how to make decorative and useful articles for the home and for gifts. It is a book that will help many a womn solve the gift problem. It gives the directions, with working drawings, of how to make many useful, gay and smart gifts.

Most interesting is the suggestion of the hanger bag that has many uses. The bag Miss Spears suggests is a perfect laundry bag to take on a trip as it folds flat in a suit case and uses little space in a closet. Any man or boy would like it for a laundry bag as it is big enough for his things and has no troublesome fastenings. A homemaker may use it for anything from dress patterns to dust cloths.

Velvet covered picture frames are also a suggestion. Others are anchors for a boy's room, applique patterns, end tables made from spoons, a corner whatnot made of spools, an ottoman from a box, monograms to personalize gifts, and a host of other suggestions.

The publisher is M. Barrows & Co., Inc. The price is $1.00.

New Appetizer For Special Menu

Try the following "personality" appetizer instead of salads on your very first dressed-up menu for guests. "Creole appetizer" has the right combination—a piquant fruit in decided contrast to the too infrequently utilized green chili peppers that are canned companions to pimiento, along with chewy chopped or sliced ripe olives, also in small containers of convenient size and already chopped or sliced for just such uses.

Remove seeds from chili peppers and cut peppers into small pieces, to make 1-3 cupful. Combine with 2-3 cup chopped or sliced ripe olives, 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce and sufficient cheese to make a paste (about 1 cup soft yellow cream cheese—the quick-melting type—and blend well). Cut 6 pineapple slices in half, making circles. Spread half the circle with olive-cheese mixture, cover with remaining circles and spread tops with plain cheese. Place on cooky sheet and broil until cheese is melted. Serves six.

Dirksen Will Testify Today On D. C. Plan

The House Fiscal Affairs Subcommittee will resume and probably conclude hearings today on the Hunter-Overton formula and the Dirksen valuation plan.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, will be the principal witness in behalf of his bill to authorize an annual appraisal of Federal property in the District by a three-man board of Treasury experts.

Chairman Hunter already has indicated a willingness to approve Dirksen's plan, providing the Hunter-Overton formula also is adopted.

The two bills are expected to be reported favorably by the subcommittee at the conclusion of the hearing or early next week.

E. Barrett Prettyman, representing the Board of Trade, will testify in behalf of the Overton formula to increase the Federal payment to the District.

Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, yesterday indorsed Representative McGehee's advocacy of a 2 per cent sales tax for the District in lieu of a broadening of the District income tax law, but he explained that it should not interfere with the adoption of his land-ratio formula for fixing the Federal payment.

Teachers' Institute Today Will Hear Dr. F. J. Brown

Dr. Francis J. Brown, executive secretary of the Committee on Education of the War Department, will be the principal speaker at the Teachers' Institute, divisions 10-13, to be held this afternoon at 2 at the Armstrong High School. He will speak on "Implications of National Defense for Future Education."

A special tour will be made by teachers tonight to defense training classes at the Abbott Vocational School, the Armstrong High School and the Phelps Vocational School. Enrollment of teachers for the tour proved so heavy, it appeared last night, they could not be accommodated at the Navy Yard.

Teachers will visit the Mellon Art Gallery tomorrow afternoon, starting at 3 o'clock from the Miner Teachers' College. This tour will follow sessions of the institute to be addressed by Dr. Harry A. Jaeger, of the office of education; Dr. Ellis Knox, of Howard University; Mitchell Dreese, of George Washington University; Walter J. Greenleaf, George Goodman and Sidney Katz.

Housewarming Tonight for New GHA Offices

Cameron G. Garman, president of Group Health Association, announced yesterday that a housewarming will be held at 7:30 tonight celebrating completion of the clinic's new addition.

The expanded quarters, where the party will be held, are on the second floor of 1326 I Street, adjoining G. H. A.'s original home at 1328 I Street. Expansion was necessitated by increases in membership, said Garman.

At present the Federal Employes' Medical cooperative whose founding in 1937 led indirectly to the doctors' antitrust trial now under way in District Court, has more than 2,900 subscribers, according to its president. Approximately 7,000 persons, including dependents of subscribers, are eligible for medical treatment on a prepayment, group practice basis.

Bandit Suspect Sues District

Charles R. Vanderhuff, 26, suspected "paper bag" bandit, has asked the District Court, which may send him to prison, for a $5,000 damage judgment against the District Government.

Vanderhuff last Friday pleaded guilty to indictments charging him with robbery and assault, but his attorney, Robert I. Miller, said yesterday that he would change the plea to not guilty before Justice F. Dickinson Letts today.

Vanderhuff was said by police to be the man who committed several holdups, carrying a pistol in a paper bag into which he stuffed his booty. Vanderhuff was arrested by officers guarding a store which had been robbed twice before.

After his arraignment, Vanderhuff told counsel about an accident he claims he had April 2, 1940. His complaint against the District, filed Tuesday, said that he fell because of a hole in the sidewalk on H Street between Seventh and Eighth Streets Southwest. The District government, he charged, was negligent in allowing the hole to be there, and therefore must pay him $5,000 for his broken left wrist and left ring finger.

Justice T. Alan Goldsborough signed an order allowing Vanderhuff's suit against the District to proceed without payment of costs upon the alleged bandit's claim that he cannot pay them.

Richmond Repels Bomber in Mock Night Attack

Richmond, Va., March 27 (AP).—Richmond got a taste of the conditions of modern war tonight when Coast Artillery batteries of searchlights and antiaircraft guns "successfully defended" the city from the attack of a lone "raider" riding in out of the East.

"We engaged the enemy and repelled any further attack," Maj. A. C. Spalding, commanding officer of the Seventy-first Coast Artillery, said at 8:30 p. m.—an hour and 15 minutes after the medium bomber (B-10) from Langley Field was first picked up by giant searchlights stationed at five points in the city.

Several times during the 75 minutes the plane circled the city, six lights were trained directly on the "invader" and the antiaircraft guns drew a bead on the shining "target."

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

MARYLAND GARDENS is being remodeled and redecorated at a cost not far below $100,000. When it reopens late this spring it should be one of the handsomest spots in the East. The huge Palm Room will be completely transformed. A new dance floor is being laid and a tremendous glass brick bar will occupy one side of the room. The cocktail lounge is also being remodeled in colorful fashion. Maryland Gardens has always been a beautiful place, but in its new incarnation it promises to be dazzling.

Washington's new "Boom Town" period is already being reflected in record business at many popular night spots. Last week at the Lounge Riviera and Mayfair was the biggest since they opened, respectively, two and six years ago. And the Rainbow Room's cash registers were swamped last Saturday with the heaviest sums they've ever tallied.

IT'S JUST AU 'VOIR, we hope, to Jean Cathon, who will leave La Salle Versailles tomorrow eve after two seasons' stay during which he piled up popularity by the ton. Jean's first stop will be New York where he'll enter a radio show . . . Jose and Paquita, who open at Versailles Monday, have been acclaimed by the Mexico City press as offering the "most authentic folk lore dances ever presented here."

TWO PYGMALIONS are appearing at the Shoreham. Billy Woods trained his lovely deaf mute dance partner, Frances Bray, to her present perfection, virtually "created" her . . . True of the "Golden Pair," says he first built the muscles of his partner, Trudy, then taught her how to use them.

CONTRASTS IN CUSTOMERS. We lunched with a horse in the Rainbow Room yesterday! It was Gene Autry's famous "Champion" who had a ringside stall by the bandstand, nibbled daintily on apples and carrots, but didn't stay for a waltz . . . It seemed like a 1941 "Beauty and the Beast" fable to then go to the Cosmos Room and find the new Cherry Blossom Queen, Nancy Strong, dancing to Carmen Cavallaro's melodies . . . At the Hi Hat, Oscar told us that former heavyweight champion, Jim Braddock, was dining in the adjoining Ambassador Room, had promised to drop in later after refereeing the fights at Turner's Arena . . . Benny Davis' singing of ""Margie" proved as much of a show-stopper at Paul Young's the other eve as it was at the Capitol Theater. Also ringsiding at P. Y.'s was Amy Fong, beauteous Chinese stripteaser . . . Over at Casino Royal we saw a huge table of happy young people who proved to be the secretaries of the entire Ohio Congressional delegation enjoying a get-together party.

Ariel of Ciro's famous Village, will give a cocktail party on Sunday at her Georgetown home in honor of her glamorous countrywoman, Rosita Rios, who is currently bewiching the Troika clientele.

EL PATIO will be open on Sunday afternoons and evenings hereafter. The Sunday hours will be from 4 p. m. to 2 a. m. This means a fine opportunity to enjoy a leisurely Sunday dinner or supper in colorful Pan-American surroundings. El Patio entertainers include songstress Virginia Joy, the flashy pianistics of Hildreth Harrison and the Countess de Bournat, psychoanalyst.

"AMERICA I'LL DEFEND" is the name of a new patriotic song now being written by prolific and talented Matt Windsor, of the Anchor Room. He wants to christen it before an audience of young soldiers in one of the nearby camps.

THE BURGUNDY ROOM of Wardman Park will be headquarters again tonight and tomorrow for Jack Coffey's orchestra and floor show. Last week it was cram-jammed with quantities of folks plaintively asking for tables when tables there were none. It was a glorious and crazy party. You'd better make reservations for it this weekend or arrive as the doors open, or you'll probably be on the outside looking in . . . The Coffeyites will present a new floor show in Metronome beginning next Monday.

Put a big red ring around May 9 on your calendar. That will be the first birthday of Restaurant "823" and preparations are already being made to toss a party to end all parties. It'll be Gala, Inc.

PURELY LIQUID. The Neptune Room is anticipating Easter by serving something they call an "Applejack Rabbit." One of its ingredients is maple syrup! . . . Maestro Don Carper, of Cafe Caprice, has invented a concoction named the "Don Carper Special." It's made of creme de menthe, Irish whisky, soda and ice. Sounds like a flareback from St. Patrick's Day . . . Maitre d'Hotel Arthur Marchisio, of the Raleigh, is proud of the proficiency of the Pall Mall Room's mixer in producing that rare rainbow of cordials, the pousse cafe. In order to make it properly, the mixer must know the exact relative weight of each cordial.

BONNY BONNIE BOYD, now rounding out a full season in the Mayflower Lounge, is an example of all the qualities that go to make up a popular night spot songstress. First of all, she has the knack of wringing the last drop of melody from a song. Importantly, too, she's winsomely pretty, dresses with modern dash, has an inborn sense of humor, likes people.

YOU'LL ENJOY those hot snacks served at the Madrillon cocktail hour. They include tiny Spanish balls and melted cheese on crackers . . . The steaks at the new Plymouth. They're thick, juicy, cooked to the exact degree of your preference . . . The big plates of savory hors d'ouevre served at the Silver Fox. With dessert and coffee they're a generous and delicious meal . . . The "Mariner's Platter" at Hogate's—six varieties of sea food including that marvelous novelty, deviled clam . . . The shrimp chop suey at the Lotus. It represents the finest of Chinese cookery, with a sea food accent.

There'll be country dancing at Kavakos' Grill from 5 to 8:30 on Sunday. And you' haven't seen nothin' if you haven't seen that "grapevince twist."

"WHATCHA KNOW JOE" is the new novelty hit song at the Nightingale. Joe Potts, clowning singer of Rodd Raffell's band, is promulgating it to a nightly chorus of audience demands for 'More!" . . . Another hit is Tommy Lawrence's version of that recently reviewed old hit, "I'll Be Tired of You."

Bridges Offers Antisabotage Act for District

Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, yesterday introduced a bill to extend a National Antisabotage Act to the District of Columbia.

On recommendation of Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech, Senator Bridges proposed to amend a World War law making it a criminal offense to destroy national defense property willfully. Congress amended the law last year to bring it up to date.

The Bridges amendment would extend the act to cover all United States and District property within the National Capital and all public utilities within a 25-mile radius of the Capitol Building.

At the same time Senator Bridges indorsed the suggestion of Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, that Washington have a trial blackout.

He explained that he believes the District should take the lead in the experiments as it is looked to as a model by many cities of the United States.

The amendment is identical with that offered by Keech on Monday to the national defense subcommittee of the House District Committee.

Keech explained that it aimed to protect public utilities outside the District boundaries because many Federal employes live outside the city and gas and power lines serving the Capital run through nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Last C. & O. Canal Mule Dies

Mutt, last of a numberless legion of mules that pulled barges through the locks and levels of the Chesapeake & Potomac Canal, died Wednesday. Mutt is shown with Harry Murray, a former canal employe on February 22, 1939, at the dedication of the canal in Georgetown as a recreational waterway.

War Referendum Bill Proposed

By the United Press

Six Senate noninterventionists yesterday jointly sponsored a proposal to require a national referendum before Congress could authorize or appropriate money for use of the armed forces outside the Western Hemisphere.

They introduced their resolution only a few hours after President Roosevelt, cruising off the Florida coast, signed the $7,000,000,000 British aid appropriation bill.

The referendum plan was sponsored by Senators Gerald P. Nye (Republican), North Dakota; Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana; Arthur Capper (Republican), Kansas; Robert M. LaFollette, jr. (Progressive), Wisconsin; D. Worth Clark (Democrat), Idaho, and Henrik Shipstead (Republican), Minnesota.

It would require only a majority vote of both House and Senate. It would not call for any action by the President. It would direct Congress to call a "national advisory election" when and if it was faced with the question of sending land, naval or air forces outside this hemisphere.

How to Breathe A Vital Study For Dancers

By Ida Jean Kain

A JAVANESE prince, recognized internationally as an authority on the dance, believes that no woman can hope to be graceful until she has learned how to breathe. It is on this precept that Tremona, globe-trotting ballerina, bases a highly original method of exercise.

"For practical purposes," she suggests, "it would be well to think of the breathing as a metronome—one of those things the music teachers use to establish a sense of rhythm—and to coordinate all movements with the inhale-exhale."

This rhythm is something the individual must discover for herself, apparently, but the inhalation and the exhalation should be of equal duration. Once the rhythm is established, Tremona says there is a natural tendency to more graceful movements but that the sense of rhythm may be deliberately heightened by doing exercises to it.

Legs "Most Expressive"

To make perfect timing easier, she has evolved an "easy-hard" way of doing exercises. While doing the exercise in its easy form, it is possible to concentrate on making each movement in rhythm to the breathing. Then, when this has been mastered, you are ready to progress to a more difficult but more effectual version of the same exercise.

Since Tremona also subscribes to Fokine's theory "that legs are the most expressive feature," it is only natural that her first exercise is aimed toward improving the leg contours.

Begin by standing on the left foot and flexing the right leg so that the thigh is at right angles to the hip and parallel to the floor. From this position, alternately straighten the leg and flex the knee. Make the movements in rhythm to the breathing.

When you have that down pat, Tremona says you can go on to the following. As you straighten the right leg in the outward kick, rise on the toes of the left foot, and when you flex the right knee, go down on left heel. Of course, the exercise should be performed on each leg with other knee flexed.

Bend Trunk Forward

You can combine a leg-contouring and hip-slimming exercise by first standing on the left foot and circling the right leg from the hip, then rising on the left toes as the right leg is circled up in front, around to the side, and up in back. The main thing, Tremona insists, is to breathe rhythmically, and to make your movements in rhythm with the breathing.

To slenderize the trunk, she thinks nothing can surpass backward bending of the trunk. To begin with, stand erect with feet parallel and arms down at sides. Then raise the right arm upward in a stretch as you step backward with the right foot.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl of 20 Was Happiest of Mortals Until Dashing Young Man Won Her Love and Then Walked Out on Her; She Can't Eat or Work for Thinking of Him

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl just 20 years old. I have a good job, the best parents in the world, and practically everything I want, but something has gone wrong. About two months ago, I met a young man, on a "blind date" arranged by a close friend. The young man turned out to be good looking, with charming manners, a splendid position and from a nice family. In fact, he is everything a girl could want in a husband.

After that first date, he started giving me a rush, and I fell in love with him. I didn't want to, because everyone had warned me that he is the kind who gives a girl a big rush and then drops her for someone else. However, he seemed so genuinely devoted to me that I discounted these stories. But after two months of almost nightly dating, he just dropped out of sight. Then I learned he was dating my best girl friend,—the girl who had introduced him to me.

About a week ago, after ignoring me for two months, he called me for a date, which I simply lacked the backbone to refuse. I went out with him, and found myself more in love with him than ever. He hasn't called again, and he's so much on my mind that I can't behave normally. I can't do my work; I am irritable with my family; I can't eat for worrying; and when I go out with other boys, I keep wondering what he is doing and who he is with. I've had "crushes," when I was in high school; but nothing like this. I am really seriously in love with him.

Whenever I am with him, he acts as if he were in love with me—but yet he never commits himself. I have thought he may be afraid to get serious. I have tried to discuss it with my mother, and she says it's just plain silly, the way I feel about him. But I know it's the real thing. Please give me your opinion. JENNY.

Best to Laugh At 'Ladies' Man'

DEAR JENNY: When a man loves a girl, or even when he is simply "interested" in her, to the point of valuing her friendly regard, he doesn't play a "hide-and-seek" game with her—if he is a person of really stable character. Obviously your heart-breaker is a light-o'-love, who regards the average attractive girl more as a foil to be used in testing or re-asserting his own ability to make a conquest, than as a sensitive human being, entitled to sensitive treatment.

I suppose you "lost out" with him by "falling" too easily and too quickly for his "line." A man who has been badly spoiled by indulgence from women,—as I imagine this boy has because of his good looks, charm, excellent social credentials and easy assurance,—can only be brought to his knees (figuratively speaking), by the girl who holds him indefinitely at arm's length, no matter how valiantly he tries to "rush" her; who keeps him cooling his heels and taking his turn in the bidding for her favor.

At the tender age of 20, when your romantic experience has included only a few high school "crushes," you could hardly be expected to know how to cope with this primarily self-loving type of man; or even to know that his type exists. But meeting such a man, and being temporarily heart-bruised by him, might almost be said to be an essential part of every woman's education. As has been said "the burnt child dreads the fire," and, also, "lightning never strikes twice in the same place!"

You will never again be so gullible in dealing with a practised ladies' man. You will laugh merrily at the "line" of all such. You will mockingly praise their "technique," at the same time indicating that their dashing address is an old and unconvincing story to you. You will ask them to ring you up again, "say, a week from Tuesday," when they urgently insist (as the breed mostly does) that you've "just got, you must" see them today, tonight, tomorrow for lunch, for dinner, etc., etc.

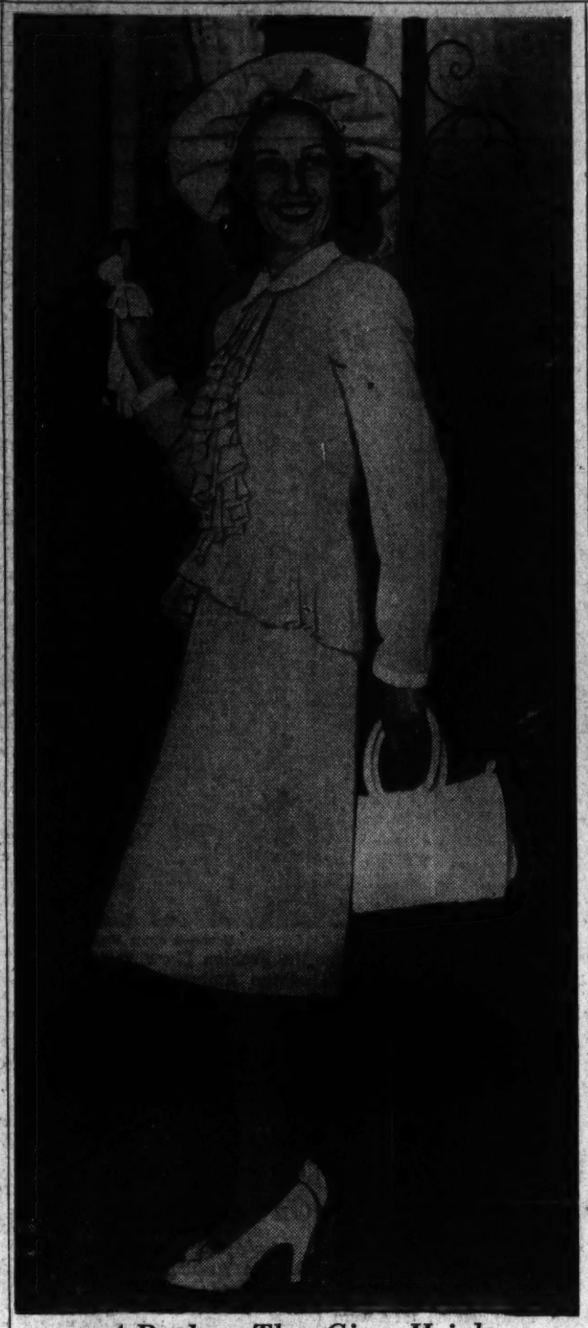
Believe me when I say you are not seriously in love with this boy. He hasn't broken your heart. At the moment, you are simply wretchedly disconsolate at being cast back down to earth, after having had a fling, for a time, at a story-book kind of experience. While the boy was "rushing" you, you loved the way he made you feel about yourself. You felt fascinating and glamorous. You lived in an emotional atmosphere of breath-taking excitement—all high romance when you were with him; all sentimental reverie immediately after leaving him; and all rapturous expectancy while you were preparing to see him again.

Thus, your current disorganization is due more to the "let-down" from that wonderful (while it lasted) emotional spree, than it is due to loss of that particular man's companionship. If another chap were to come along, who would sweep you into a comparable dither, you wouldn't care if you never saw this man again. So—my opinion is this: you haven't met (and lost!) True Love. And my advice is: Chalk the experience up to profit; and stop thinking about the young man or brooding over his fickle behavior. He just isn't worth that much emotional and mental expenditure, so far as you are concerned. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Baked Potato Wafers

Baked Potato Wafers have a distinctive flavor and will bake more quickly than whole potatoes. Select large well shaped potatoes. Scrub them well. Rub them with butter. Cut them, without peeling them, in round ¼-inch thick. Place them in a generously buttered skillet flat side down. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Cover them and bake in moderate over, 375 degrees until they are tender. Turn the slices as they brown. Serve them garnished with minced parsley.



A Peplum That Gives Height

Bows and jabots, ruffles and ruches, frills and frou-frou are all upon us. And they're taking a vertical direction. Some trimming, such as peplums and tiers, do go around, but most of it is up and down, as on the peplum and frill dress above. This dress, worn at Miami Beach during the season, is of beige silk. It not only sports one frill, but a double jabot which somehow ends in a peplum. The narrow white pique collar and cuffs add that well-starched look to the costume. For those who want a peplum but cannot afford to be cut in two, the jabot which simulates a brief peplum, is just the thing

Make Furniture For Your Home

WHAT charming things you can make for your home from odds and ends! Who would ever guess that adorable hanging wall cupboard began life as a lowly grapefruit box?

The type of wooden box or crate that holds one layer of fruit is the best kind to use, but any box of similar shape will do. The glamor you add with dainty flowered wall paper and a colorful paint such as emerald green.

Your first step is to sandpaper the box inside and out and paint boards for shelves. Spread paste on paper and cover sides of crate first, letting paper overlap at bottom. Then paste on bottom piece.

For the scrollwork facings, you first cut a paper pattern, following a printed design. Then, using a sharp knife, you cut facing out of heavy nonwarping cardboard—or you can use plywood and a jigsaw.

Finally fasten shelves with screws from the outside, tack on facings and give the outside a coat of paint. With shelf-hangers at upper corners your cupboard is complete.

Fun to dress up your home with lovely furnishings you've made yourself—a handsome coffee table made from a packing case, a matching bedspread and dressing table.

Too Hot an Iron Bad for Silk

White silk, as every housewife knows, has a marked tendency to turn yellow. This yellow condition frequently comes about through pressing the silk with a too hot iron. But, while silk is susceptible to heat, it is less susceptible to moist heat. So, at professional laundries silks are pressed with steam irons, and pressed so lightly and so quickly that the garment has no opportunity to become overheated and turn color.

However, if you iron your white silk blouses and lingerie at home, the American Institute of Laundering recommends that your iron never be hotter than 300 degrees Fahrenheit. In fact, for complete insurance it is better to have your iron as much less than this 300 degrees as you can have it and still remove the wrinkles.

To a Friend

I fete you not at luncheons,
I honor you not with teas,
I send you no flowers nor trinkets,

But about your human frailties
I keep my lips well shut,
And I never come in with the comment,

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch)

Both social and charitable activities are virtually at a standstill this week as Truthtown socialites have rushed North and South for skiing and swimming.

Mrs. Mike DePace, who was promoting the benefit bazaar for the Indigents' Coal Fund, has postponed the event until after Easter. Mrs. DePace yesterday received an invitation to go on a yachting cruise with friends in Nassau, who are said to be intimates of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor. She immediately rushed South on a specially chartered plane.

The benefit ball to buy a bomber to aid England repel invasion also has been postponed, as the chairman of the ball, Mrs. Rufus Rossiter Antelope, had to leave for Palm Beach to get some sunshine, and the secretary, Mrs. Juniper Bounce, left for Canada.

"I simply had to get in some skiing before the spring thaws set in," said Mrs. Bounce. Mrs. Antelope said her physician had discovered she had a deficiency of vitamin C and ordered immediate sun baths.

Deb Nightingales

Society—what is left of it—is in a state of exhaustion today as the result of taking in three debuts last night of glamour, debs as night club singers.

The upper crusters rushed first to the Spanish Loft to see Miss Mimi Merryfeather make her first appearance before a mike. From there they dashed to the Babylonian Room of the Hotel Rococco to see Miss Sylvia Slinker in her professional debut. The singing debut of Miss Daphne Dizzard at the DuBarry Lounge was held up until the socialites could arrive.

In order to make the rounds on time Ditherton (Puppy) Doolittle 3d engaged an ambulance, which went screaming through the streets carrying him and a party of friends.

Mrs. Beetle's Bit

Mrs. Bartholomew Beetle, eccentric grande dame of Truthtown society, has announced she will organize a Good Cheer Committee for Patriotic Purposes. The committee will promote crap games among draftees.

Next Week

The week we are going to answer that letter the memory of which has been hounding our conscience for the last six months.

The week we are going to clean out all the old papers and trinkets and other rubbish that is cluttering up our lives and start with a clean slate.

The week we are going to do our exercises, and brush our hair, and get caught up in our sleep, and take one of those long leisurely and luxurious baths that beauty editors are always writing about.

The week we are going to be less hurried and distrait, and really take time to be pleasant to everyone we meet.

The week we are going to call on the friend we keep thinking about and never get around to seeing.

The week we are going to make a thorough survey of our wardrobe and then sit down with pencil and paper and work out an intelligent five-year plan.

The week we are going to read all those articles with the "good information" in them in the stack of old magazines we have been saving.

The week that in some mysterious way the tempo of life is going to slow down and we are going to live more normally.

The week that is the most beautiful in all the 52 because its serene vision sustains us through all the chaotic hours of this week.

Dry Shampoo Perfected for Dogs

A dry shampoo is the latest fashion for dogs. It eliminates that old tussle and splashing each time you try to bathe your pet. Eight years ago a group of Maine sportsmen (dog lovers all) set out to find a new method of cleaning and keeping healthy the skins of their valuable animals. After much experimentation they perfected a product with the woodsey odor of pine.

The secret of this product is said to be its penetrating quality, enabling it to spread out and kill all parasites.

'Best Dressed Women' Hold Stage as Señhora de Martins Entertains at Tea and Fashion Show to Help Red Cross

By Hope Ridings Miller.

"BEST-DRESSED WOMEN" took over the stage yesterday afternoon when Senhora de Martins, wife of the Brazilian Ambassador, entertained at a Red Cross benefit tea and fashion show at the Brazilian Embassy. Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Vice President, recently named "the best-dressed in public life," came in early, wearing a tailored black suit, pin-striped in white, and a modified black sailor, trimmed with white wings.

Mrs. Kent Legare, one of "ten best-dressed women in America"—at least that's what a flock of designers decided some time ago—coasted in, wearing a snappy black frock, accented with gray flowing sleeves, and a towering gray turban, trimmed in black. A flock of Powers models were also on hand, to show 47 different costumes, while the crowd of notables "Oh'd" and "Ah'd" and a flock of young men hovered in the doorway, wondering if there would be a chance to talk to those pretty mannequins later.

Any way you look at it, the event was the man-bites-dog social and fashion story of the season. I haven't seen more official and social notables under one roof for ages; and when a style parade can bring out the Vice President of the United States, several Senators, and a sizable number of State Department officials—to say nothing of diplomats by the dozens—well, it's news, and no mistake about it.

THE RED CROSS is well over $3,000 to the good today, as a result of the fete; scores of Capitalites who paid $10 a head to attend, feel they've done a good day's work, and six well-known designers and a famous New York shop have scooped in enough Washington publicity to last them a long time. So, I'd say the party was a Success, with a capital "S." And if I were Senhora de Martins, I'd be happy about the whole thing.

Shortly after 5 o'clock, the broad stairway at the Brazilian Embassy was heavy with social and official notables who were making their way to the second floor drawing rooms where the fashion show went on the boards. Senhora de Martins, looking every bit as pretty as a Powers model herself, stood at the top of the stairway. She wore a floor-length brown marquisette frock, fashioned with a fitted bodice, appliqued in white lace, and a full skirt. A spray of brown orchids in her dark hair further accented her attractive ensemble.

Small tables, covered with pale rose cloths and centered with tall, white tapers in silver holders, were arranged in the three spacious upstairs rooms of the embassy. You could look to right or left and see just about everybody you'd ever heard of in Washington. A list of names I took down read very much like several pages from the diplomatic blue book, the social register and the Congressional directory. Long before the music started, and the Powers models started doing their stuff, I had made the rounds of the large drawing room, and wondered how I'd ever remember who all happened to be there.

OF THE HONORARY patronesses, I saw two—Mrs. Cordell Hull and Mrs. Sumner Welles—who were there quite early. Mrs. Hull, who said she'd spent most of the day having her household belongings moved to her new apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel, wore a smart black frock, with a silver fox jacket, a small turban, and a necklace and bracelet that would make fashion news anywhere in the world. Where'd she get them? In New York. What were they made of? You'd never believe it, but they were small gold, red and green safety pins, cleverly strung on elastic bands! And she got them in New York from a woman who is selling them to make money for the Red Cross.

Mrs. Welles was smartly turned out in a black frock, worn with a silver fox jacket and a narrow-brimmed white hat—very becoming.

"I think a lot of women here look better than the fashion models," said Ralph Snowden Hill, who may be a bit prejudiced in favor of the Washington ladies.

"I'll say one thing—this show's worth every cent of the $10," observed Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck.

That, I might say, seemed to be the consensus. And I'd like to add that a glimpse of the spectators themselves was something to write home about. A special center of attention was Mme. Fotitch, wife of the Yugoslav Minister, who had friends flocking around her during the entire party. The Belgian Ambassador stopped by the table where Senator Millard Tydings was sitting. Mrs. Tydings, whose wide brimmed black straw hat, in the back of her pompadour, was one of the prettiest headgears there, mingled in the crowd and, in the manner of any good patroness, saw that everybody had a good seat.

MRS. PAUL V. McNUTT, whose natty blue sailor was a stop-press fashion note, was at the Tydings table, as was Mrs. Warren Austin. In the same section of the drawing room were Mrs Martin Vogel and her niece, attractive Baroness Stackelberg, Mrs. Jacob Leander Mrs. James Le Cron was at the Wallace table, as were several others. Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, whose black ensemble was attractively accented with touches of yellow, moved from one table to another, greeting her friends. I heard that Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles was there, but I didn't see him. Somebody whispered that Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis was telling fortunes in a convenient nook, but I didn't get around to see her.

I did see Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover turning over quite a sizable sum of money to Senhora de Martins, however, and I heard that Mrs. Bertram Long won the door prize at the close of the event. Meanwhile, all members of the Brazilian Embassy—including the Ambassador himself—were here, there and everywhere, seeing that everybody had a good time. I noticed, particularly, pretty Senhora de Goutheir and her husband, who seemed to know everybody present.

WHO ELSE was there? Well, as I've hinted, practically Everybody. To mention but a few more—there was an attractive trio made up of Mrs. Pearsons Rust, Mrs. Sidney Lee and Mrs. Hugh Byers. Mrs. J. L. Houghteling was accompanied by her husband. Coming in for the latter part of the party was Assistant Secretary of State Adolf Berle, jr., who joined his wife, one of the active (and I mean active) patronesses for the event.

Mme. Ertegun was accompanied by her guest, attractive Mlle. Emel Tek. Mme. Bruggmann, trimly turned out in a grey frock, worn with a black and red straw sailor, was seen in the throng; as were Mrs. Herbert Feis, Mrs. Dean Acheson, Baroness de Gruben and Mrs. Claude Pepper. Mrs. Nathan Wyeth was on hand to see that the wheels of the event turned smoothly. Mrs. Emil Hurja sat at a table with Mrs. Thomas Richard Cowell, Mrs. Hortense Odlum and Countess Ilinska, whose name appeared on the program as Fira Benenson.

Dr. Leo S. Rowe was there, also, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Clayton, Miss Pauletta Guffey, Mme. Karl Wessel, Princess Boncompagni, Miss Janet Fish, Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould, who sat with Mrs. Fred Britten; the Minister of Portugal and Mme. Bianchi, and Senora de Espil, who wins my vote as a "best-dressed" any time, anywhere. Mrs. Eldridge Jordan was among those present. She sat with Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, Mrs. Hornbeck, Mrs. Ernest G. Draper and Mrs. Breckinridge Bayne.

As to who else was there—well, it would be a lot easier to name the ones who weren't. As I've said before—it was the Big Social Event, one of the few times a benefit fete has ever made that grade . . . in the history of Washington.

About the Town

—with Dudley Harmon

MISS HELEN DAVIS, daughter of Dwight F. Davis, has gotten a job on a national news magazine in New York. She is beginning at the bottom, by filing clippings, but hopes to end up as a writer.

DUDLEY HARMON

Miss Davis went to New York several months ago to live. She will come to Washington for the weekend. Her sister, Cynthia, will leave today for New York, where she has been making her home for the past two or three years. She came to Washington to help organize a local branch of the Women Flyers of America. At a tea at her home the other afternoon, Miss Davis wore the emblem of the group, a silver clip, on the lapel of her smart black silk suit. She took up aviation some time ago and now has her pilot's license. She does her flying on Long Island in rented planes, as she has decided to try them all out before selecting one of her own.

MISS DAVIS is treasurer of the Women Flyers organization. She has a standing invitation to all the members of her family to go up with her, but the only one who has accepted so far is her sister, Helen. Miss Davis was telling the other day how the New York group hopes to organize a course in plane construction and repair, learning welding, riveting and other jobs which hitherto have been confined mostly to men. As has been proven in England, such knowledge would be invaluable if this country should get into the war. Englishwomen have been doing important work as ground crews, ever since the war began.

The women flyers idea has caught on so in Washington that now the group has a long waiting list of applicants, many of them girls who work in the Government. Among the enthusiasts is Mrs. Sutherland Mayo, of Georgetown. She has had about 100 hours in the air, and hopes soon to get her pilot's license. Mrs. Mayo has been in Washington very little this winter and plans soon to go up to New York, where she keeps an apartment, to spend a few days.

MISS SIBILLA SKIDELSKY, energetic daughter of Mme. de Bianchi, wife of the Portuguese Minister, has an article in the current number of a national magazine. It's titled, "Young America Sculps," and in it the author discusses the outstanding young men and women who are literally carving careers for themselves in the field of sculpture.

ODDS AND ENDS: The Brazilian Ambassador and Senora de Martins will be hosts at dinner April 17 . . . Herbert Pell, who recently sailed as Minister to Hungary, carried, along with 800 gallons of gas for his journey across Europe, 12 dresses for Mrs. Pell. They are all gray, the only color she wears. Frank Kent and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth have christened Mrs. Truxtun Beale "Mme. Chairwoman." So busy is she with plans for the Greek benefit Sunday evening that she breakfasts with a piece of toast in one hand and the telephone in the other. Byron MacDonald will show his Odyssey Cruise movies at the Willard tomorrow. He recently raised $18,000 for Greece, on a tour of the Middle West.

League Has Hobby Exhibit

In the nature of a hobby show is the exhibition of rare and beautiful items now on display in the gallery of the Junior League headquarters at 2001 Massachusetts Avenue.

Members of the league, who have collected unusual objects from all over the world, have turned over their collections for the exhibition, which went on the boards Wednesday and will continue through today.

Among the unusual treasures being shown is the collection of 65 foreign dolls belonging to Miss Anne Dudley Flannery and the four Russian dolls belonging to Miss Barbara Bolling. Mrs. Landra Platt is showing two rare maps, dated 1630 and 1642. Mrs. Francis Almirall's collection of silver snuff boxes is unique, as are the Russian and Chinese priest robes owned by Mrs. Edward Page.

Miss Dudley Gregory is exhibiting a collection of foreign bracelets and Miss Jane Culbertson a Russian ikon. Self-made are the miniature Colonial kitchen and tap rooms shown by Mrs. John A. Rice and Mrs. Lewis Clark's group of small, jade cups is exquisite. Sally Kinnebrew, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Kinnebrew, has a collection of various miniature objects.

Margaret Lane Is Guest at Home Of Maj. Cutts

Maj. and Mrs. Richard Cutts have as their guest for several weeks Miss Margaret Bliss Lane, daughter of the United States Minister to Yugoslavia and Mrs. Arthur Bliss Lane, who are in Belgrade.

Miss Lane, who arrived at the Alexandria home of her hosts yesterday from New York, flew to this country by clipper from Europe early in the winter. Several parties are being planned in her honor.

Auxiliary Out in Force For Walton Convention

By Jessie Ash Arndt

The Post Club Editor

Members of the Women's Auxiliary to the Izaak Walton League of America are here in full force for the annual convention of the league, which opened its sessions yesterday at the Willard Hotel.

The Washington auxiliary, of which Mrs. Lewis Radcliffe is president, is acting as official hostess to the visiting wives of league members, whether or not they are affiliated with the auxiliary.

Although many Waltonians consider fishing and hunting as sports that are sacred to the male, there are also those who enjoy having their wives go along on their fishing and hunting trips, say the lady Waltons. A number of the women active in the auxiliary branches in various parts of the country are those who share their husbands' enthusiasm for the out-of-doors. The primary purp se of the auxiliary, like that of the league, is, however, to promote conservation of wild life and natural resources, rather than to bring fishermen together to swap fish stories.

Because of the prejudice among some of the Waltonians against permitting women even to approach the realm of their activities, it has been only within the past few years that the auxiliary branches have been formed in various sections. That in Washington is only a year old.

One of the large and active branches is the one in Burlington, Iowa, of which Mrs. Arnold Zurawski is president. Mrs. Zurawski, who is attending the convention with her husband, is as enthusiastic about hunting, fishing and "birding" as he is.

"Birding," she says is going out from time to time, beginning in January, when the birds start to return from the South, and discovering those that come first, noting their names, their songs and their plumage. On their 12-acre place, located just within the Burlington city limits, Mrs. Zurawski has four feeding stations in which she keeps grain and seed during the winter, three suet stations and, in the summer, seven watering places for the birds. This winter she has had ten different kinds of birds as boarders, with as many as 18 cardinals feeding at once. Others that remained included the tufted titmouse, chickadee, nut hatch, downy creeper, zebra bird, flicker, woodpecker, blue jay and the unpopular but nevertheless valuable little sparrow, she says.

She has also fed a covey of quail all winter, ten pairs of pheasants which the game warden released on their place, and has made pets of the brown and gray squirrels and five little chipmunks that are so tame they will scamper onto her shoulder for peanuts.

The Walton Auxiliary, in Burlington, under her leadership, has encourage the feeding of wild birds by everyone during the severe winter weather, especially by the school children. With the Izaak Walton League members, the women are giving support to measures to prevent the pollution of streams, and are also cooperating with the schools in promoting an interest in nature study among the children. The city commissioners there have issued a map showing all of the trees in the city's parks, with their names, and the auxiliary is now making an effort to have plates put on the trees, identifying them, so as to arouse interest in knowing the different kinds and preserving them.

Mrs. E. F. Colgrove, president of the Frankfort (Ind.) Auxiliary and a State vice president, says the branch there awards prizes to school children for building birdhouses. Similar work in promoting interest in conservation is being carried on by the auxiliaries elsewhere.

Mrs. Harry Gormley, president of the auxiliary recently formed at Rockville, Md., was one of the women assisting the local hostess committee. Officers of the local auxiliary, in addition to Mrs. Radcliffe, include: Mrs. T. E. Hamill, vice president; Mrs. John F. Stowell, recording secretary; Mrs. John S. Hamill, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Harold Vermule, treasurer.

Yesterday afternoon the women went by bus to Mount Vernon, where Mrs. Radcliffe placed a wreath on the tombs of George and Martha Washington.

Last night they had a "Dutch treat" dinner at the Willard, followed by a visit to the Congressional Library. This morning they will visit the White House, and in the afternoon, call on their representatives in Congress and visit Congress in session. The annual banquet and dance will be held tonight. Tomorrow afternoon, from 4 to 6, Mrs. Radcliffe will be hostess at tea at her home, 3600 Thirty-second Street.

P.-T. Congress Aids Seal Sale

Members of the Parent-Teacher Congress are cooperating with the Association for Crippled Children in the sale of seals to raise funds for the association's work. Mrs. C. D. Lowe, president of the congress, and Mrs. Evelyn Bright Buckley, vice president in charge of the health department, served last night at the opening of the main booth, located at Uline Ice Arena.

Miguel Uline is president of the Association for Crippled Children, and William H. Sardo, jr., is in charge of the sale of seals. The organization provides care and needed appliances for crippled children other than those who have suffered from infantile paralysis, and who are provided for by funds raised by the President's Birthday Balls.

GOOD NEWS for the 75th Club was the notification that Francis Lansdale, the boy whom it helped while he attended the rehabilitation school, had a job.

The first year of its organization the club, composed of wives of members of Congress who came in with the seventy-fifth session, learned that Francis' wheel chair had been stolen. He was a high school student. Under the leadership of the first president, Mrs. John R. Murdock, the club raised money for a new chair and gave it to him in the name of Mrs. Roosevelt, as a tribute to her interest in welfare. Then Francis needed transportatoin to and from school and the club helped with that. Now his education is completed and he is earning his own livelihood.

Mrs. Luther Patrick is president of the club, which had its annual luncheon in Mrs. Roosevelt's honor last week.

GLEE CLUB PROGRAM—The Congressional Club will present the Birmingham-Southern College Choir in a concert today at 3 p. m., at the regular club meeting.

The choir includes 52 mixed voices with instrumental accompaniment.

Raymond Floyd Anderson, the director, is widely known in musical circles and has made many appearances as conductor of combined civic choruses and orchestras.

Mrs. William H. Larrabee, chairman of hostesses, has announced four wives of members of Congress from Alabama among those who will pour. They include Mrs. Frank W. Boykin, Mrs. George M. Grant, Mrs. Pete Jarman and Mrs. Luther Patrick. Also pouring will be associate members, Miss Catherine Rich, Miss Padget Ann Schall, Miss Mary Alice Arnold and Mrs. Elmer Bourgerie. Other associate members assisting will be Mrs. Josephine Herbert, jr., Miss Margaret Clement, Miss Mary Clement and Mrs. W. C. Taylor.

PLAN CONFERENCE—The spring conference of the South Atlantic region of the American Federation of Soroptimist Clubs, will be held at Staunton, Va., on April 25 and 26. Regional representatives, as well as lay members of the Soroptimist Clubs of Baltimore, Alexandria, Arlington County, Montgomery County, Prince Georges County, Westminster, Md., and Washington, will be in attendance. The conference will open on Saturday, at 10 a. m., and continue through Sunday.

There will be a sight-seeing tour of Staunton and the surrounding country, as a social feature of the conference. The Soroptimist Club of Staunton is a new club which has recently come into the American Federation of Soroptimist Clubs.

300 Leaders Form Palestine Planning Unit

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), of New York, announced yesterday that more than 300 outstanding Government officials, churchmen and civic leaders had joined in establishing the American Palestine Committee, under his chairmanship, to support the movement for developing Palestine as "An outpost of freedom and social justice" and preparing the Holy Land for large-scale colonization of Jewish refugees from Europe during the postwar period.

Named as cochairman with Senator Wagner is Senator Charles L. McNary, of Oregon, Republican minority leader, while William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, former Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, and Msgr. John A. Ryan, of Catholic University, are serving as vice chairmen.

A dinner here some time in April will mark the launching of the American Palestine Committee's program of activities.

Among the members of the newly organized American Palestine committee are Attorney General Jackson, Secretary of the Interior Ickes, Secretary of Agriculture Wickard, Wendell L. Willkie, Alfred E. Smith, Clarence A. Dykstra, director of Selective Service and head of the Defense Mediation Board; Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security administrator; John M. Carmody, Federal Works administrator, and William Allen White, of Emporia, Kans.

Pointing out that by treaty and Congressional enactment the American Government has formally recognized and approved the establishment of a Jewish national home in Palestine, Senator Wagner declared that this policy has received the public indorsement of Presidents Wilson, Harding, Coolidge, Hoover and Roosevelt. In assuming the chairmanship, Senator Wagner said:

"The Jewish national home in Palestine has been a world-sanctioned experiment in democracy. It must be protected and cherished today as an outpost of freedom and social justice. Its continued upbuilding must be a vital part of a just world order when the present conflict is over. The American Palestine Committee will aim to give expression to the interest, sympathy and moral support of the American people for this humane and statesmanlike cause."

More than 150 members of the United States Senate and House representating both major parties are listed on the rolls of the American Palestine Committee, and the Governors of 19 States have joined.

Mrs. Halifax Makes Purchases To Aid Britain

New York, March 27.—Lady Halifax, wife of the British Ambassador to the United States, visited the Easter Shop, Fifth Avenue, today accompanied by the Countess of Abingdon and Mrs. Godfrey Haggard, wife of the British consul general in New York.

The Easter Shop is under auspices of Refugees of England, Inc., of which the countess is chairman, and whose purpose is to raise money for hte organization's work in England, where it ministers to 100,000 refugees from countries under Nazi domination.

Lady Halifax, arriving shortly after 12:30 p. m., was much amused by the "laughing lion," a lapel ornament made of soft leather and pinned one on her coat, in addition to the "victory bouquet" of red, white and blue flowers which the reception committee gave to her. She made direct purchases also of a couple of toy dogs and a blue silk handkerchief printed with emblems of Great Britain.

The Mall Not a Parade Ground

Park Police yesterday arrested 37 more short-cutters along the Mall, for a total of 92 in two days.

Among the culprits was a soldier, Charles E. Willis, 23, of Arlington Cantonment. He had tougher luck than the others. He didn't have the necessary $2 collateral so police turned him over to military police.

He Said a Mouthful

The rule for all air traveling imbibers to remember is that persons under the influence of liquor are not permitted to travel aboard commercial planes.

Recently a gentleman entered an airline office, seeking passage. To prove his sobriety the man said:

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Gen. Burns Directs Lend-Lease Program

Maj. Gen. James H. Burns is acting administrator of the $7,000,000,000 lend-lease program. He is acting under instructions from Harry Hopkins, who is expected to be appointed administrator. Hopkins is on a fishing trip with the President. Gen. Burns is operating from the offices of War Undersecretary Robert Patterson. He holds the title of executive assistant to the undersecretary. Hopkins probably will appoint Burns his first assistant administrator. Burns has been holding conferences this week with representatives of the British Purchasing Commission and Federal officials to determine British needs and the available supply in this country.

William Knudsen's definition of an expert is "a mechanic 40 miles from home" . . . Only 25 per cent of the persons whose names are on the civil service replacement list have been given defense jobs. There have been 8,570 names certified and only 2,355 appointed . . . The Bureau of Animal Industry is experimenting with dogs at the Beltsville farm. The actions of a litter of stupid dogs is being compared with a litter of bright dogs . . . AFGE executive council will meet today and tomorrow at the Hamilton. President Jim Burns will preside.

State Department is among the defense agencies looking for more space. It plans to expand its visa division by approximately 300 employes by June 1. The division plans a tighter control on all aliens entering this country. Under consideration is a move to place the entire visa division in the Winder Building. But a place first must be found for the War Department employes in the building. Also discussed is a plan for the State Department to take over the Court of Claims Building at Seventeenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue.

United States Housing Authority has set up a defense division to pass on all projects financed through the $150,000,000 Lanham defense housing appropriation. Col. Walter L. Simpson has been appointed acting chief. He was former regional director for the District, Maryland and Virginia . . . National Defense Recreational Association will meet tonight in the OPM cafe to elect officers. Temporary officers are F. C. Whetzel, president; J. F. Townley, vice president; Thelma Dixon, secretary, and W. A. Lafferty, treasurer.

C. G. Marshall has been appointed chief of the Commerce press service . . . Scores of Federal officials are taking a spring holiday while the boss is away. They'll all be back next week by the time F. D. R. returns . . . A delegation of Farmers Union representatives is here to urge Congress to pass its pet legislation. The delegates also will demand that Farm Credit loosen up on its credit policy

UFWA is giving "all out" aid to Margaret O. November to get her reinstated in the War Department. Mrs. November was dismissed by the department on charges of communistic connections. A delegation of union officials, among others, charges that the firing of Mrs. November "was based on hearsay and unsubstantiated rumor." They insist Mrs. November was discharged because she was leading a drive to sign up War employes in the UFWA.

Recurring rumors have it that a food administration to control prices and the use of foods soon will be set up. If the Administration has any such plans, it will probably consult Chester Morrill, secretary of the Federal Reserve System. Morrill was a young attorney in the solicitor's office at Agriculture during the World War. He drafted the food control and food distribution acts. Food was controlled by a separate agency during the 1917-20 period, but Morrill usually looked out for the department's interests.

D. C. Faces Lathers' Strike

U. S. Conciliators Act to Avert Threatened Tie-up In Building Work

The United States Conciliation Service was hurriedly called in yesterday to mediate an impending strike of lathers which threatens to tie up virtually all Government and commercial construction in the District and two defense housing projects in nearby Virginia and Maryland.

A six-hour conference yesterday by representatives of the Employing Plasterers Association, Local 9 of the International Union of Wood, Wire and Metal Workers (A. F. of L.) and Labor Department conciliation experts, failed to bring an agreement over terms of a new contract.

The present employer-union contract expires Monday midnight. Spokesmen for both the employers and union expressed the belief last night that an agreement would be reached by deadline time, but at the Conciliation Service the situation was described as "serious."

Strike Vote Denied

A conciliation service official said last night he understood that a vote to strike in the event that negotiations failed already had been taken by union members. Both the employers' association and the union denied that a strike vote had been taken. Harvey L. Murray, union business agent, said that the strike question probably would be put to a vote at a special meeting to be held at 7 p. m. today.

Should a strike be declared all lathing work would stop on the New War Department Building, the 19-story Naval Hospital in Bethesda, two barracks at the Quantico (Va.) Marine Base, and an emergency housing project at the Indian Head (Md.) Naval Powder Factory.

Frank Murphy, secretary of the Employing Plasterers' Association, said late yesterday that 12 commercial buildings in the District would also be affected. Murphy said he was optimistic about the outcome of the negotiations and had "every hope of settlement at tonight's meeting."

Further Talks Set

Labor Department conciliators, at the end of yesterday's meeting, set 9 p. m. today as the time for further negotiations.

"Suggestions" for the new contract asked by the union include a pay increase from $13 to $14 for an 8-hour day, one of the principal demands. The lathers work on a 5-day week basis.

Union Representative Murray said last night a strike would directly affect approximately 125 members of the local. However, cessation of work by lathers, would halt the work of plasterers and carpenters who follow the lathers on construction jobs.

Labor Department officers also pointed out that the plasterers—with whom the employers' association has a separate agreement—would probably refuse to pass picket lines.

John Locher, president of the A. F. of L. Building Trades Council in the District, expressed belief last night that an agreement will be reached before the present contract expires. The Building Trades Council, he said, has not been called into the negotiations by the local.

Hobby Show Prizes Given

The second annual hobby show to be presented by the Silver Spring Community Center, which opened Wednesday night, last night drew more than 600 spectators who witnessed the presentation of awards.

The show will be continued tonight and Saturday night from 6 to 11 p. m. Tonight will be known as the "Silver Spring Board of Trade Night" and will include the judging of art and photography exhibits.

At last night's showing, blue ribbons were awarded to the following:

Russell Hastings Millwood, Robert L. Saunders, Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Carter, the Rev. Paul Croseclose, Mrs. E. R. Patton, Mrs. C. E. Yeatman, Mrs. J. H. Fales, J. H. Yeatman, J. W. Beers, Martin Reis, jr., Russel Moon, Teddy Proctor, Clifford Van Vleit, Jimmie Spear, John Stinson, Robert Brown and D. H. Reichgut.

Red ribbons, indicating second place, were awarded Mae Ellen Colburn and Robert Suckey, and green ribbons for third place were awarded Robert McQueeny and W. Hynan.

Judges for last night's selections were William P. Marks, William F. McKenna, William Corlin, Robert A. Brown, John J. Braund and Winship I. Breen.

Robert Frost Uses Imagery of Verse to Tell Of His Hopes for Democracy Before 500

Reads His Poems To Express Essence Of His Ideas

By Charles Mercer
Post Staff Writer

Robert Frost, the poet, talked quietly last night of his hopes for this democracy. He talked in the imagery of the poet. And he read from his verse in the dryly philosophical voice of a New England farmer conversing with his neighbors.

His "neighbors" were more than 500 persons who overflowed Coolidge Auditorium in the Congressional Library. Several hundred others were turned away from hearing him discuss the role of a poet in a democracy in the second of a series of discussions by leading American poets sponsored by the Congressional Library and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer.

Frost borrowed from the spirit of a line of verse by Archibald MacLeish, the Librarian of Congress, who introduced him.

MacLeish has written, "A poem should not mean, but be."

Frost did not "mean." He "was"—a thoughtful man letting his friends in on his thoughts through the analogy of his verse.

Text But No Moral

Like a Yankee parson in one of his own works he took a text. But he did not press a moral.

His "text" was the eye at the apex of the truncated pyramid in the Great Seal of the United States.

"Whoever put the eye in the seal meant that democracy would always mean refraining from power," he said. "It meant that he would never have anyone at the apex but God.

"Another way of looking at it is that the founding fathers who put that eye there had in mind an uncompleted power in government . . . The greatest weakness in me is a willingness to see the United States the most powerful thing in the world, even though it costs us some of our democracy."

Evidence of Power

He illustrated as an evidence of the increasing power of the Federal Government a recent ruling of the Supreme Court which opined that water flowing through States no longer belongs to the individual States.

"Even the rain off my roof no longer belongs to me," added Frost, rubbing his nose dryly.

Admitting that he might be conservative, he said, "A conservative is a person who says he won't do what he's just about to do."

"The government of which I dream is going to refuse to take its own advantage," he declared, "just as I hope to see the comman man refuse to seek his own advantage, as was expected only of gentlemen in the old days."

Stating that he hopes democracy refuses to seize the full measure of the power it might attain, Frost pointed out that it is impossible to be sure which course is right. One must change his mind, he said.

"We make our bed fresh every morning, so why not make up our mind fresh every morning?"

He did not cast his words into the limits of the projected theme: "The Role of a Poet in Democracy." Of his work he said, "I have always written on one of two subjects—democracy or love."

Of his selections from his verse Frost said, "I lend myself to a poem to see if it won't lead me to some figuritiveness like you see on the Great Seal . . . I have not written a poem that has not as definite a figure on it as the Seal."

Reads Poems

He bega nhis readings with "Triple Plate"—the poem which appears in published form for the first time on the editorial page of The Post this morning.

"Happiness Makes Up in Height for What It Lacks in Breadth," "To a Young Wretch," "The Runaway," "Stopping by Woods on a Snowy Evening," "The Road Not Taken," "Birches" and "Departmental" he interspersed with dry comment, occasionally aiding the audience in interpreting what he had written.

Thunderous applause brought him back to the platform to read "Mending Wall," "Confusion," "Precaution" and "Fire and Ice."

He kept his audience tensely silent with the expectation of some sweeping statement that would sum up his philosophy. They were rewarded by hearing the white-haired, gently mocking poet tell all about himself in occasional lines of his verse. As in the last line of 'Birches:'

"One could do worse than be a swinger of birches."

Right to Strike Is Stressed At G.W.U. Forum

The right of labor to strike and a warning to utilize this right with utmost caution in the war industries were emphasized last night before 500 persons attending George Washington University's three day institute on the law of labor relations at the Chamber of Commerce auditorium, H Street and Connecticut Avenue Northwest.

Prof. Alexander H. Frey, of the University of Pennsylvania Law School, urged the discretionary use of the strike in war industries in order to maintain the goodwill of the American people. Representative Gale (Republican), of Minnesota, defended the right to strike, but urged a stay period.

Prof. Harry Shulman, of Yale University Law School and Representative Hobbs (Democrat), of Alabama, attacked the National Labor Relations Board.

Randolph Promises Speedy Action on Liquor Act Changes

Prompt action on the recommended changes in the District Alcoholic Beverage Control Act was promised yesterday by Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee. Representative Eberharter (Democrat), Pennsylvania, promised to aid in getting the legislation through the House.

One of the recommended changes in the law would permit patrons to stand at bars and drink. Another would permit taverns to remain open until 2 a. m. Sundays.

Randolph explained that, as he does not drink, he has no opinion on the question of standing or sitting at the bar.

Representative Eberharter, who conducted the liquor law inquiry last year, said he is not sure he will support the commissioner's proposals for a one-year's residence before a license is granted and a one-day permit for the sale of beer and wine.

The residence requirement should be three years, he said, and the one-day permit, designed for picnics and the like, might be abused.

The liquor law changes may run into opposition in the Senate, however, as Senator Reynolds, chairman of the Senate District Committee, called on the Commissioners several days ago and urged that the ban on bar drinking be continued.

Reynolds also asked the Commissioners to invoke bans on advertising of liquor prices, but the District heads rejected the proposed regulation.

Hasten, Hasten, Jason! Bring In The Garbage Can

Citizens are too careless in leaving garbage cans out in the street after collection, according to the Fort Davis Citizens Association, which voted at a meeting last night to urge quicker removal of the receptacles from the sidewalks. The meeting was held in the Ryland Methodist Church, Branch Avenue and S Street Southeast.

In the absence of the president, the election of officers and nomination of first and second vice presidents was postponed until the next meeting.

Resolutions were adopted to oppose affiliation with the new Municipal Assembly, to request establishment of a branch library in Anacostia, to oppose any District sales tax, to favor an increase in the pay of the policemen and firemen of the District, and to approve the Overton plan.

Md. Senate Concurs On Bill for Bonds For Superhighway

Annapolis, Md., March 27 (AP).—The Senate tonight concurred in House amendments to a bill authorizing the State roads commission to issue bonds for construction of a new Baltimore-Washington motorway, and sent the bill to Gov. O'Conor.

Only two votes were cast in opposition to the measure to allow a privately financed toll road which, proponents argued, would help speed traffic between the two cities. The highway would cost an estimated $30,000,000, and would revert to State ownership after about 30 years.

'Tobacco Road,' Subdued, Comes to Palace Screen

Charley Grapewin and Marjorie Rambeau Head Cast in Metamorphosis of Stage Play; Brief Supplementaries Augment the Feature

"TOBACCO ROAD," in the film version visible on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater this week, save in the continued emphasis upon its abysmal penury, will hardly be recognizable to those familiar with the orginal stage piece, which has played here so often and so profitably.

BELL

It was inevitable, of course, that under the rigid requirements of the Hays office, the play should be stripped of its blasphemy, profanity and the frank exposition of the mental and moral depravity that dominated the Lester family amid the barren and squalid surroundings of their ramshackle, backwoods "homestead"—a rickety shack originally pitched on a patch of seedless soil and now in the midst of verdant trees and a potentially productive countryside where the crumbling ruins of once imposing colonnaded manor houses still stand. Instead of a grim, bitter and more or less ghastly study of the "lowest form of animal life" among the Georgia share-croppers, "Tobacco Road," as the Georgian Nunnally Johnson has arranged it for the screen, becomes an amusing depiction of a wily old man's attempt to hang onto the land he loves but upon which he never labors.

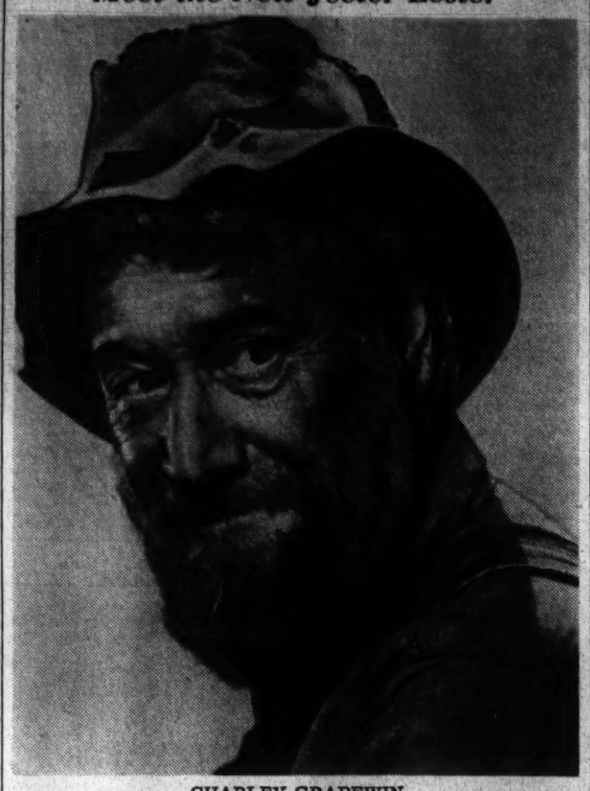
It is difficult for one who has viewed the stage play so many times to divorce himself from its sinister implications and view the celluloid conception with any degree of detachment. It is an experience so new and so revolutionary that it becomes a ticklish matter to estimate the public appeal of the picture. As a photographic replica of the stage work it misses by a thousand miles. As a newly devised study of a poverty-stricken family, loving their land and dreading the poor farm, it is an examination of basic human impulses that is warming, humorous and completely devoid of those pernicious elements of physical, mental and moral degeneration which, it must be admitted, played no small part in attracting attention to the stage drama Mr. Kirkland extracted from Mr. Caldwell's book. You will pity the Lesters on the screen and will be amused by them, but they never will shock even the most sensitive of your finer sensibilities.

The play has undergone numerous changes in its transition to the gelatins. Pearl, the beautiful daughter of the Lesters, married to Lov and as truant a wife as ever lived, does not appear in the film. Ellie May, the less desirable daughter, but still one who would do for Lov in a pinch, becomes a character almost mute. Peabody, not seen on the stage, comes to life on the screen, for no other than comic reasons, and Grandma is an even more effacing, wordless figure for the cameras than she was for the footlights. As I say, it is such a vast metamorphosis that appraisal becomes a sorry task. Personally, I would not trade the worst of the stage productions for a dozen such film versions. The stage play was, and is, a pretty strong and nasty dish, but it was, and is, vivid, fearless in its exposures and compelling in its power. The film is by way of being a cup of cambric tea.

The fault—if it be a fault—lies not with the cast, but with the Hays office, Adaptor Johnson and Darryl F. Zanuck's determination to bring to the screen a play he never could have hoped to reproduce in anything remotely approximating its original form. Charley Grapewin, one of Hollywood's most gifted character comedians, makes Jeeter Lester a spry and especially well-nourished old rapscallion, whose appetite for the turnips he steals from Lov seems a bit incomprehensible, what with his robustness, good humor and all. His is a new Jeeter, as it would have to be under the production code, and alive with a lusty humor which, nevertheless, will reveal the suppressions of the soft pedal to all who have seen Henry Hull, Jim Barton, John Barton, Taylor Holmes, Jim Bell, "Slim" Timblin, Eddie Garr or any of the myriad others who have done the part on the boards. Elizabeth Patterson is an adequate Ada, mother of a brood of 17 or 18 Lesters—she never can remember precisely how many or the names of them all—and Marjorie Rambeau sings her way through the role of Sister Bessie with an evangelical fervor that supplants sex.

A new release in Pete Smith's "Quizz Bizz" series; a cartoon comedy, "Home Guard," and the "News of the Day" are the auxiliaries of a feature that will depend for favor upon how well you knew and how much you liked "Tobacco Road" on the stage. If you didn't like it at all, you probably will love the picture.

Meet the New Jeeter Lester



CHARLEY GRAPEWIN

one of the cinema's foremost character comedians, who brings new qualities to the stellar figure in the Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of "Tobacco Road," now on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. Marjorie Rambeau, Elizabeth Patterson and William Tracy are foremost in the supporting cast of what might be termed, after eight years, a "'New Tobacco Road"

In Hollywood

Hollywood, March 27.

Alan Mowbray, who gives the best performance, next to Vivien Leigh, in "That Hamilton Woman," hasn't seen himself on the screen for six years. However, his wife and friends wanted to see the premiere. Dinner was served at home. The butler-chauffeur-handyman was busy, so Alan chauffeured his wife and friends to the opening, asked the starter what time to return, then went home and relaxed.

HOPPER

Warners dish it out but can they take it? They who have made suspending actors an indoor sport have certainly kicked Humphrey Bogart about. From "Man-power," because his was too great, he went to "The Bad Man from Missouri," which sounded like punishment. He's out of that.

Donald Meek's favorite pastime is raising flowers. With such screen bullies as Brian Donlevy, Humphrey Bogart, and Boris Karloff hepped on pansy planting, you'd think a man like Donnie would at least go in for bulldogging steers as a hobby.

The town could take a hint from Bob Hope and Bing Crosby, who are bowing on each other's air shows free to help the b. o. (and I don't mean body odor or the soap ads).

The Capitol Presents 'Bad Man' As Vehicle for Wallace Beery

By Richard L. Coe

"THE BAD MAN." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the play by Porter Emerson Browne, adapted to the screen by Wells Root, costarring Wallace Beery and Lionel Barrymore, with Laraine Day, Ronald Reagan, Henry Travers, Chris Pin Martin, Tom Conway, Chill Ills, Nydia Westman and Charles Stevens. Directed by Richard Thorpe. Reviewed Thursday afternoon, at the Capitol Theater.

Like a man's affection for an old shoe is Hollywood's mesmerized fascination toward the hoary sagas of its youth. There's no more fun in life, seem to think the men who make the pictures, than hauling out the old chestnuts for another dressing. Latest to receive this questionable treatment is Porter Emerson Browne's play, "The Bad Man," in which Wallace Beery and Lionel Barrymore are frisking coyly on the Capitol screen.

Surely there's nothing too wrong with this story except that it's run the gamut from "super-specials" to serialized quickies. Holbrook Blinn played the role on the stage, there have been two picturizations and many other versions under other names. So now we have Wallace Beery, that tender blimp, playing the part for all the x's that sound like j's, etc.

It's that story of the ruthless bandit of old Me-he-co with the rod of iron and the heart of jelly. In his marauding he comes upon a ranchful of folks about to lose their all to (1) a merciless mortgage holder or (2) a wretch who wants the property for the oil he believes it contains. The latter's wife loves the nephew of the ranch's elderly owner and we're off.

What else is there to say? Beery is the same as he's been for umpteen roles as a well-fed Bad Man Lopez, who remembers that the man he's about to hang once saved his life. Lionel Barrymore is confined to the sputtering vehemence that an unvaried succession of roles have made his lot. Young love is personified by Loraine Day and Ronald Reagan and there is the customary swarthy low-life that must do much in marring the Good Neighbor policy so to the fore in political pronunciamentos (Me-he-can!)

On the whole, "The Bad Man" won't bite you even if it should happen to keep you awake.

For the stage review, Gene Ford has devised an advance salute to the Cherry Blossoms, with Paul Haakon to bring his genuine distinction to the bill. By a curious quirk of booking, dancer Haakon arrives on F Street when his only peer, Paul Draper, is playing a block away and the fact that the two will appear on the same stage tomorrow evening for the benefit of Greek Relief bodes well for that admirable charity. Haakon revives his always splendid Bull Fighter's dance as his high spot and joins the Rockets in their Cherry Blossom finale.

Yesterday's stage presentation was brightened no end by the charming film star Maureen O'Sullivan who, after urging support for the Greek Relief from the stage, stood in the lobby to sell tickets for the charity.

Also tops in the regular stage revue's line-up are the veteran Huberts, Frank and Jean, whose drunks are as wryly humorous as ever, with that surprise revelation of their finale.

Alan Gale, a new m. c. whose humor is not that heard on a children's picnic, is another feature of the "Cherry Blossoms." The Six Honeys tumble and Lynn Allison lifts her silvery voice twice, once for a Friml number with the orchestra and again on the stage for "In Cherry Blossom Time."

Sam Jack Kaufman's overture unleashes an enthusiastic boogie-woogie answer to the Friml opener and Art Brown, the Eddie Guest of the organ, is at his console.

Oh, yes, there's a particularly interesting short about Puerto Rico and a sincerely moving clip of Grecian tragedy, with Melvyn Douglas reading an intelligent and restrained commentary.

Marsha Is Pursued By New Auto Jinx

Marshall Hunt is beginning to believe she's just not designed to own a new car.

Several months ago, Marsha's then new automobile was stolen.

Returning late one recent evening from M-G-M where she is featured in "Blossoms In the Dust," she parked that car's successor at the curb in front of her Hollywood apartment. Barely in the house, Marsha heard a crash, but gave it little thought. Later, it developed, the crash had been a hit-and-run driver smashing into her parked car. He changed it from an almost new auto into junk.

Leonard Lyons:

New York, March 27.

SWANK: Rogers' Corner, the Eighth Avenue restaurant formerly occupied by Jack Dempsey's, invited the Greenwich Council of Women to convene in the Rumba Room there . . . The blue-blooded Mrs. Stanley P. Woodward, president of the council, made this clear and direct reply: "Dear Sir. Replying to your favor of March 13, our executives would be averse to announcing a dinner in a Rumba Room. We have ascertained that the very vulgar rumba dance is not Spanish, but a dance of the Negroes of South America and one which all decent South and Central Americans condemn. Yours very truly—Mrs. Stanley P. Woodward."

LYONS

LURE: Gregory Ratoff visited La Martinique and revealed to Danny Kaye how he first came to America. Ratoff was working in Paris, where Lee Shubert saw him. The producer invited him to his table and asked: "How would you like to come to America and work for me?" . . . "How motch?" asked Ratoff . . . "$150 a week," said Shubert . . . "What," asked Ratoff, "ees the beegest salary h'enyboddy makes in H-America?" . . . "$200 a week," Shubert assured him . . . "Warry vell," replied Ratoff, "H'I come."

DANCE: In last Sunday's Herald Tribune, Walter Terry's article, "Broadway Dance" reported: "As you know, Gertrude Lawrence turns on the works in 'Lady in the Dark' and as you also know she is star stuff no matter what she does. Her dancing, though far from complex, is tremendously effective, and even in the straight dramatic episodes the movements of her body are those of a dancer who knows how to reflect character and mood in terms of gesture and motion . . . and to prove her versatility further, she manages to look like and move like Ruth St. Denis in the first act finale called "The Woman at the Altar" . . . This is no reflection upon Miss Lawrence's talents, but that dance in the first act finale is done by her double, to give Gertie a chance to change her clothes. She's Virginia Peine.

CELEBRATION: Sam and Bella Spewack, the playwrights, were in Sardi's celebrating Bella's birthday . . . Mrs. Spewack was called to the phone, where she listened to a feminine voice singing: "Happy Birthday to You," etc. . . . "Do you know who this is?" the voice then asked . . . "Of course," replied Bella. "It's Western Union" . . . "No, no," the caller replied, and identified herself—Katharine Cornell.

CHATTER: Prince Serge Obolensky is taking lessons in gunnery and the American manual of arms three times a week, preparing to accept a commission . . . Stock Exchange officials are talking of Leon Henderson as successor to William McC. Martin, president of the Stock Exchange. Henderson, the New Deal economist, also has two other offers—one for $16,000 a year for half his time as a private economic consultant . . . Dorothy Parker and Alan Campbell have been signed by Warner Brothers to adapt "Skeffington" for the screen . . . Gary Cooper, Barbara Stanwyck, Edward Arnold and Jimmy Gleason are reshooting a new ending for "Meet John Doe." It will be sent to the film exchanges to be substituted for the current ending . . . Ludwig Bemelmans is dramatizing his Hotel Splendide series, which have been appearing in the New Yorker. Gilbert Miller my produce it.

CRITIQUE: John Klempner, author of the new novel, "Another Night, Another Day," lunched with Maxwell Perkins, the Scribner editor, at Schrafft's restaurant in the Chrysler Building. In one of the chapters of the book, two of the characters dine at Schrafft's and order everything on the dinner menu, from oysters to dessert . . . Perkins showed this chapter to the hostess in the restaurant, while the author waited eagerly for her critical approval . . . "I'm sorry," she said firmly, "but that's terrible. We never serve oysters on the dollar-thirty-five dinner."

TIME: William Saroyan, who wrote his Pulitzer prize play in six days, asked Billy Rose for some advice. "Write a revue," Rose suggested. "Write eight sketches of six minutes each" . . . "That's a good, sound suggestion," Saroyan agreed . . . "Now, get this straight," Rose reminded. "I said write sketches OF six minutes each—not IN."

Rip-Roaring Rodeo Opens, Autry and All

Gene Autry rode Champion Jr. through a flaming hoop; Col. Cy Compton, of Cody, Wyo., caught 10 running horses with one toss of his lariat, cowboys played mounted basketball and wrestled steers. It all happened at the opening of the "World's Championship Rodeo" last night at Uline-Ice Arena.

Several thousand onlookers gathered at the arena, the ice supplanted by a dirt surface, to watch dozens of cowboys pit their alertness against the strength and swiftness of horses and steers.

The show will continue nightly through April 6 with thousands of dollars in cash prizes to be awarded. Col. Jim Eskew, of Garland, Tex., director of the rodeo, announced.

Autry, singing cowboy of the screen, appeared in white outfit, with his two movie horses, Champion and Champion, jr., performing with him. They jumped through hoops and did other tricks, before the finale leap through the flaming hoop. Autry is also singing the songs which he has made famous, during the rodeo.

Col. Eskew, in bright red-checked shirt and broad-brimmed hat, declared that the steer-wrestling is one of the most dangerous sports—in which a cowboy leaps from the back of a horse, grasps a wild steer by the horns and attempts to subdue it, flat on its side.

Several cowgirls took part in last night's show in bronc riding. A band of Indians in feathered headdresses added an extra of color as they played popular tunes.

Margaret Wycherly Plays Unique Role

As if Margaret Wycherly already didn't have a lot of distinctions, she had a new one recently.

Miss Wycherly, who recently completed 2½ years on Broadway in "Tobacco Road," plays a leading part in Joseph Conrad's "Victory," already seen in Washington.

It is a full length part, with Miss Wycherly appearing in approximately half the scenes. But she speaks exactly three lines. The three lines total 11 words.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 27 (INS).—The dynamite combination in "Honky Tonk" is Lana Turner and Clark Gable. This picture, starting soon, has been on and off for the last six months. When we first asked for a confirmation that Lana and Clark would be together in this gold rush opus of the Yukon days, there were denials galore. At that time Lana was considered just another red-headed "oomph" girl, but when L. B. Mayer saw her in "Zeigfeld Girl" and heard the favorable reports after the Huntington Park sneak preview, he realized the little Turner girl had become a real actress.

PARSONS

As the hard-boiled dance girl in "Honky Tonk," Lana gets the biggest role of her career, so far, and she and Clark will have Jack Conway as their director. Lana now steps out of the sweater set and it is a good thing, for the Hays office has said, "No more sweater publicity."

There has been a lot of talk that Hedy Lamarr has been suspended by M.-G.-M., because she refused to report for "Uniform," and also because she was still battling over the old salary question. Hedy has actually been sick in bed for over two weeks and there was no battle when she stepped out of her role in "Uniform." She went to Louis B. Mayer and told him that she was run down, under weight and that she wanted to take the 12 weeks allotted her in her contract now. She said she had gone from picture to picture, so L. B. told her while he felt it was too bad she didn't want to make the picture with Clark Gable but that it was all right with the studio. Apparently Hedy's condition has been more serious than anyone realized.

Constance Bennett reads "Gangsters In Uniform" tomorrow and if it is as good on paper as it is in the telling she'll make the movie for Al Rosen, at Columbia. Francis Lederer, who has been in New York, is sold enough on the male lead to make the trip west to appear with Connie. The story sounds interesting and not the usual propaganda with which everyone has become bored. The heroine is a fashion editor of a German newspaper in 1932—before the Nazis came into power. She writes an anonymous column called "Gangsters In Uniform" which revolves around the Nazis' attempt to put her on the spot.

Ernst Lubitsch was the first director to make sophisticated comedies of married life. Then his pattern was used extensively by other directors. But that Ernst is still the master of subtle comedy is proved in "That Uncertain Feeling"—one of the most amusing pictures this writer has ever seen. "That Uncertain Feeling" is good because it is not zany, impossible nonsense, but a story that could happen in the life of any wife with too much time on her hands. Merle Oberon is superb as the wife. Her clothes are so smart and she has such subtlety and finesse and never attempts to force the comedy scenes. Melvyn Douglas is perfect as the husband. Sol Lesser certainly deserves credit—first "Our Town" and now this.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The Preston Sturgeses have dated the stork for August; Alice Faye's divorce became final today. She leaves tomorrow on the S. S. America for a holiday; Jean Gabin, devasting French import, holding court in the polo lounge of the Beverly Hills Hotel almost every afternoon; are Tom Brown and his former wife, Natalie Draper, seeing heart to heart again? They've had two dates this week; Gloria Jean, who thinks Sabu is terrific, lunched with him at the Farmers Market.

Maureen O'Hara received a cable from her mother, Mrs. Rita Fitzsimmons, that she had arrived in London after being stranded six weeks in Lisbon. The plane was attacked by a Nazi bomber en route, which must have been a bad nightmare come true; Rosemary Lane leaves in two weeks for another personal appearance tour; she did all right by herself on the last one; Baby Sandy's new brother is named Gary Henville, on account of Gary Cooper is Mrs. H.'s favorite actor; Mickey Rooney's newest enthusiasm is figure skating. Maybe he'll learn to skate out his own figure—No. 1 at the box office.

Pat Dane and Cedric Gibbons a Beverly Tropics duo. Thought her new contract specified she should stay out of night spots.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

GIANTS GETTING PRETTY STUNTED:

Miami, Fla., March 27.—The New York Giants are training here in tropical splendor but they aren't the quality folks they used to be in the National League. They're even mixing socially these days with the lowly Phillies. At least they share the city as a spring training grounds. The last few years have not been kind to the Giants.

POVICH

They haven't been in the first division in two years, and they're scrimping to get a ball team together this season. They don't have money enough to buy a ball player they wanted during the winter, according to one report, and another that seems generally accepted is that the Giants' front office had to borrow the cash to take the team South.

The Giants used to be able to buy any ball player they liked. The long line of rich men who have been owners of the Giants has run out. There is no fat checkbook around the office any more. Young Horace Stoneham, jr., who inherited the club from his dad, no longer has a heap of ready cash. The Giants are up against it.

Brooklyn IS in the League

Around the league, ball players no longer are eager to be sold or traded to the Giants. That was an ambition not so many years ago. The Giants could pay fat salaries, and the Giants were usually figuring in the World Series spoils. But in these times, ball players want to be on the payroll of the Dodgers and the Reds and the Cubs, where the big money is.

Bill Terry's famous taunt that boomeranged, his haughty "Is Brooklyn in the league?" inquiry was answered again last season. It was only because of the fact that the red-hot Brooklyn club was attracting such crowds in its game with the Giants that the New York club got anything like an even break at the box office for the year. Without those Brooklyn gates, the Giants would have faced a serious financial crisis.

The Giants are now having more than their share of holdout trouble. The ball players are no longer getting the fancy salaries of the good old days when to be a Giant was to be well paid. There are mutterings among them concerning the heavy dough being dragged down by the front-office men of the Giants. One figure is that four men—Terry, Stoneham, Treasurer Leo Bondy and Secretary Eddie Brannick—draw down $132,000 in salaries. In the Giants' lean years there isn't much left for the players, and they are beginning not to like it. On the Washington Club, corresponding officials, including President Clark Griffith, draw a combined salary of only $60,000.

Maybe Terry's to Blame

It was a remarkable sort of heritage that the Giants seem to have wasted. For 25 years the Giants were tops in organized baseball, and New York was virtually a solid Giant town. The American League had hard sledding but it has dislodged the Giants in New York's favor and the Yankees for several years has been the city's transcendant team.

The suspicion is that Bill Terry's sour-puss management of the club hasn't helped it. Terry has succeeded in alienating most of the support of the press with his feuds with baseball writers. He was feuding with them as early as 1933 and 1935 and '36, but the Giants were wining pennants in those days and making money. Owner Stoneham could scarcely criticize under those conditions. But with the club on evil times, and Terry still feuding, the matter may be presenting a different face to Stoneham. At $45,000 a year Terry may not be regarded exactly as an asset.

The Yankees did not seriously challenge the Giants for the New York patronage until 1923 when the late Col. Ruppert built and dedicated Yankee Stadium. Babe Ruth had been with the club three years, and his home run feats were attracting attention, but New York was still a Giant town. The fact that the Giants beat the Yankees in the intra-city World Series of 1921-22 established New York even more firmly as a Giant town. But with 1923 and a Yankee triumph in the series the pendulum began to swing the other way. Last year the Yanks outdrew the Giants, 2 to 1.

New York fans were contemptuous of the Yankees in the early days of the American League. The colorful John McGraw was managing the club, and the Giants were presenting such stars as Christy Mathewson, Iron Man McGinnity, Jeff Tesreau, Larry Doyle, Arthur Devlin and Fred Merkle. The New York press was ignoring the Yankees, even resenting them.

The American League selected Clark Griffith to invade New York with an American League club in 1902, and he took up what appeared to be a hopeless battle to challenge the Giants for patronage. The Giants wouldn't let their rival team play at the Polo Grounds and Griffith was forced to construct a stadium at 168th Street and Broadway, 11 blocks beyond the end of the subway. Griffith couldn't even persuade a New York newspaper to send a correspondent South with the city's American League team. The Giants had the city locked up. But they've let it escape.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Review of the Field:

Orlando, Fla., March 27.—Here's the way they looked to me, pallies:

INDIANS—Solidest looking American League club. Wonderful pitching that might become great pitching if Mel Harder continues to look good. He is throwing with everything he's got for the first time in three years. Improved punch and a much, much better spirit. Definitely the team to beat in the American League. Virtually protected against prolonged slumps by presence of Bobby Feller.

CONSIDINE

YANKEES—Full of ginger, but a little on the "iffy" side. Will Rizzuto and Priddy come through? And Gomez? How much has Ruffing got left? Will Gordon stick on first? Can Dickey catch 100 games? The 1941 Yanks have shown flashes of extreme brilliance, when everybody was clicking. But on the whole the club doesn't strike us as a very good bet to win.

TIGERS—The lowest held defending champs in years. The talk is that Greenberg definitely will be drafted, mainly because of the bad effect it would have on other draft eligibles if he were passed up. Without him the Tigers might have trouble finishing third. With him they'll be tough, very tough, but repeat performances of 1940 feats by Newsom and Rowe is a lot to ask, especially of Rowe. A good ball club, though old as sin, but don't bet too much on them. Not as sound as Indians.

RED SOX—Tom Yawkey's slore-boughten stars have worn out, but it will be the pitching that makes this club look bad. Much trust is being placed in youngsters Mickey Harris and Earl Johnson—both short of prime. Not very fast, not an exceptional fielding club. Ted Williams is happier this year and should have a fine season but it will take a lot more than that. Not even a good long shot bet.

SENATORS—Good C. C. C. outfield (Case, Cramer and Chapman) but mostly W. P. A. labor after that—with the exception of a splendid young pitcher, Sid Hudson, and Buddy Lewis and Cecil Travis. No punch, leaky infield.

REDS—Beautifully knit Club. Best pitching any team has had in years. Not exactly a standout choice to win National League Pennant but certainly our No. 1 choice. Possible flaws are illness of Ival Goodman (who may be replaced by Jimmy Gleeson) and past habit of Eddie Joost, new shortstop, to run out of steam. Leo Durocher thinks the Reds may have traded away pennant when they traded Bill Myers. Leo doesn't think Monte Pearson will win for the Reds. We do.

DODGERS—Headed for runner-up berth again, we suspect. Slightly better rounded punch than Reds, but the pitching can't be compared with the Reds' throwing, nor is the fielding quite as airtight, or the base running as good. Too much to ask of Fitzsimmons that he win 16 games again. Fine bunch of ball players, and they should finish closer to top than last year, for it isn't likely the club will be as hard hit by injuries. But they don't pay off on close in this league.

CARDS—Good long shot. Finished as strongly as the Reds over last three months of the 1940 season, after deplorable

Another Good Show Goes to Credit of Arena Wrestlers

Greenberg Collects Pair and York 1; Bucs Defeat Chisox, 6-5; Other Exhibition News

By the Associated Press

Lakeland, Fla., March 27.—Hank Greenberg blasted two home runs and Rudy York one today to give the Detroit Tigers a 10-to-9 exhibition victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers second stringers.

The margin was Greenberg's second round-tripper, off Steve Rachunok in the ninth inning. His other, and York's, were hit off Luke Hamlin in the second stanza.

Buck Newsom started on the mound for Detroit and himself was hammered for seven hits and six runs in five innings.

Pirates Beat Chisox

Hollywood, Calif., March 27 (AP).—Rookie Alf Anderson from Atlanta, planted his picture more firmly in the mind of Manager Frankie Frisch today by clouting a ninth-inning home run with two mates on base to give Pittsburg's Pirates a 6-to-5 victory over the Chicago Americans.

Joe Haynes, big White Stocking right-hander, was the victim of the blow, which came with two out.

Anderson, flashy-looking shortstop described some time ago by Frisch as a fellow "who grows on you by his work," was reported earlier in the day as tabbed for a bit more minor-league seasoning.

Pauline Betz Wins Indoor Tennis Title

By the Associated Press

Chestnut Hill, Mass., March 27.—Pauline Betz, of Los Angeles, won the national women's indoor tennis singles championship today and then, combined with Dorothy May Bundy, of Santa Monica, Calif., captured the doubles title.

Miss Betz also won the mixed doubles paired with Al Stitt, of Brookline.

The top-seeded Miss Betz, considered a possible successor to Alice Marble as queen of the courts, required more than two hours to defeat second-seeded Miss Bundy in the singles, 6—1, 10—12, 6—2.

Then she and her defeated opponent teamed up in the doubles to defeat Mrs. George Wightman, of Brookline, and Katherine Winthrop, of Manchester, Mass, —4, —3.

Land-of-the-Sky Golf Meet Rained Out; Reset Today

By the Associated Press

Asheville, N. C., March 27.—Rain today caused postponement of the first round of the $5,000 Land of The Sky Open Golf Tournament in which the country's leading shotmakers are entered.

With clear weather predicted for the next 24 hours the tournament committee planned to run off single rounds tomorrow and Saturday and the final 36 holes Sunday.

Cox Beaten In Torrid Mat Bout at Arena

Villainous Lou Plummer won an unpopular decision over that hardy perennial, Joe Cox, before 2,500 fans at Turner's Arena last night in the headline event of one of the most pleasing wrestling shows of the season.

Either boy is big enough to go bear hunting with a switch, and from the outset they started in to prove that nature in the raw is seldom mild. More of the epic struggle was waged out in the crowd than in the ring. Finally, Plummer got the upper hand and pinned Joe to the mat with a body roll and a press to take the decision in 28 minutes, just 2 minutes before the deadline for the match. This outraged Joe's sensibilities, and he took several spectacular pokes at Referee Casey Berger before the ring could be cleared.

Miss Burke Wins

In the semifinal, Mildred Burke, who is listed as the world's champion lady wrestler at 130 pounds, took a decision from wiry Patsy Miller, the Texas cowgirl, in 17 minutes. The redhead employed a cradle hold to subdue her opponent. Both contestants used a number of unladylike tactics during the bout and each was thrown out of the ring at least once.

One of the most rousing bouts on the card was supplied by Fred (Spider) Grobmier and handsome Gene De Valteau, a French refugee. Sidling around the inclosure like an ill-tempered octopus, Grobmier kicked and slugged from all angles and had the better of the popular De Valteau all the way. Once the Frenchman perched up on a ring post to escape the Spider and it took a deal of persuasion from Benny Bortnick, the arbiter, to lure him back into the fray. In sheer desperation De Valteau went berserk at one stage and proceeded to choke Grobmier in approved style to the immense enjoyment of the audience. The end came at 23 minutes when Grobby applied a figure-four scissors hold to clinch the nod.

Hero Is Victor

The hero conquered in the Milo Steinborn-Chief White Feather affair when the grizzled Steinborn put the bear hug on the Redskin at the end of 18½ strenuous minutes.

Right also triumphed in the opener when Warren Bockwinkle won over Pierre De Glane, of Canada, with a crotch hold and body press in 18¼ minutes.—OSCAR ELDER.

Redskins to Train In San Diego, Cal.

Invitation of California Officials Accepted by President George Marshall

The Washington Redskins have accepted an invitation from the mayor of San Diego, Calif., P. J. Benbough, to do their 1941 pre-season training in the far southern California metropolis, it was announced here last night.

The invitation which came by telegram yesterday afternoon was immediately accepted on behalf of the Redskins by George P. Marshall, president, who wired Mayor Benbough in reply:

"The Washington Redskins are delighted to accept your kind invitation to train and play in San Diego this coming August. We are also pleased that we are participants in a civic enterprise which is of great merit. It is perfectly natural that Washington, the heart of the Nation, should be vitally interested in San Diego, the heart of the Nation's defense."

Citizens of San Diego, Marshall explained, started the movement to invite the Redskins on a suggestion made by Erny Pinckert, former All-American back who last fall terminated a brilliant career of nine years active service in the Skin's regular line-up. Marshall, who recently returned from the Coast and who visited San Diego at Pinckert's behest, stated that it is planned to hold an intrasquad game as a benefit for the SanDiego Police Relief Association. Details of this affair and all arrangements for facilities will be worked out within a few weeks when Genereal Manager Jack Espey will fly out to San Diego, he added.

Sportsman Arranges Deal

In the invitation Mayor Benbough said: "Lynn Platner (veteran San Diego sports organizer and promoter) indicated that it might be possible for you to arrange for the Washington Redskins to do their training in San Diego. It is indeed a pleasure for me to issue this invitation to you to do so. You will find San Diegans very cordial."

According to Marshall, Platner is recognized on the West Coast as one of that region's most successful sports promoters and in all probability will head the city's activities in connection with the intrasquad game, the annual contest

S. W. Louisiana Paces N.C.A.A. Fight Tourney

By the Associated Press

State College, Pa., March 27.—Qualifying five men, Southwestern Louisiana Institute led 14 rivals into the semifinal round of the National Collegiate Boxing Championship Tournament tonight.

Representatives of the Lafayette, La., school, undefeated in dual meet competition this year, upheld their pretournament rating as one of the favorites with their excellent showing in today's preliminary and quarter-final program of 34 bouts, but another team favorite, Wisconsin, was virtually eliminated.

Also undefeated during the regular season, Wisconsin sent only three of eight entries into tomorrow night's rounds, and one of these advanced on a bye.

Tied with Wisconsin in number of survivors were Louisiana State University, Idaho, and Penn State while the University of Miami at Coral Gables, Fla.; San Jose (Calif.) Teachers, North Carolina, Florida and Washington State had two each. Single representatives from Virginia, Superior (Wis.) Teachers, West Virginia, California Aggies and Lock Haven (Pa.) State Teachers completed the semifinal bracket.

Two Technicals

Only two of tonight's 17 bouts ended in technical knockouts, in contrast to five such endings in the afternoon program. Knockout winners were Frank Kara, Idaho, 127 pounded, whose bout with John Chihon, of the Indiana (Pa.) Teachers, was stopped after a minute and 56

Former N.Y. Hurler Was Star in 1939

Price of Sale Not Divulged; Harris Happy in Getting Big Right-Hander

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Miami, Fla., March 27.—To their blinking surprise, the Nats today found themselves in possession of Pitcher Steve Sundra, late of the Yankees. They bought him in a cash deal, with both clubs refusing to divulge the sum involved.

The Washington club suspected that it would soon land a Yankee pitcher, but Sundra was not expected to be the man. The Nats had put in a claim for several young pitchers on whom the Yankees had asked waivers, and it was one of these they hoped to acquire.

As recently as 1939, the big, right-handed Sundra had been the pitching sensation of the American League with a record of 11 victories and 1 defeat for the Yankees, and the Nats assumed he was not for sale.

However, with the Yankees overloaded with pitchers, it is believed that General Manager Ed Barrow agreed to sell Sundra to the Washington club on the condition that the Nats would not claim other pitchers the Yanks want to send back to the minors for more seasoning. The New York club must gain waivers on four young hurlers who are deemed brilliant prospects with more minor league experience, and the Nats, as the seventh-place team last year, would have second crack at them.

Glad to Get Hurler

There is high elation in the Nats' camp over the acquisition of Sundra. Manager Bucky Harris stated today that "I'm not looking any further for our fourth starting pitcher. Sundra is it. I don't care what he did last year. He's a better pitcher than any we've got except Leonard, Hudson and Chase."

The Yankees' decision to sell Sundra appeared sort of mysterious. He won only four games and lost six last season, being used chiefly as a relief pitcher, but it appeared that they are giving up quickly on a fellow who could win 11 and lose only one the year before.

Clark Griffith, owner of the Nats, pointed out that the Yankees would not have sold Sundra to such as the Boston Red Sox or the Cleveland Indians who are rated as the chief rivals of the New York club.

"They don't want to strengthen teams like those, but they figure that Washington won't be a serious contender, even with Sundra. We may fool 'em."

Sundra is a 6 foot 1 inch 190-pound Slovenian who throws a hard ball. When he was winning ten in a row in 1939, he was mixing his fast stuff with a clever fork ball that broke off sharply. "He threw the heaviest ball I ever batted against," said Ossie Bluege, who has been looking at big league pitching for 20 years.

He's a rugged fellow, and what remains of his hair is black. He comes to the Nats on his thirtieth birthday. Sundra hails originally from Luxor, Pa., but his home for several years has been in Cleveland.

Sundra figured in the baseball news in a minor sort of way in

Eagles Conclude Home Hockey Season Tonight at Riverside

River Vale To Furnish Opposition

Norm Burns, Dewey To Bow Out Here; Locals May Lose Other Players

A long, last look at two of the greatest stars ever to appear in Eastern Hockey League competition awaits Washingtonians tonight when the Eastern League champion Washington Eagles conclude their 1940-41 home season against the River Vale Skeeters at Riverside Stadium at 8:30 o'clock.

Norm Burns, high scoring center, and Hal Dewey, veteran wingman who has enjoyed one of his greatest seasons, are scheduled to bow out with the Eagles tonight.

Burns, one of the greatest scoring players the Eastern League has ever turned out, is to join the Cleveland Barons of the American Hockey League next season while Dewey will take over his full time job of brakeman on a Canadian railroad.

Players May Get Call

Several other stars who helped the Eagles to their first pennant may be called to the Canadian colors upon their arrival in Canada shortly.

In the event of an upset of the Eagles tonight the Skeeters, one of the Eastern League's hottest teams since midseason, can throw the United States Hockey Association's series into confusion and bring both River Vale and Atlantic City back into the running for the handsome trophy cup to be awarded the winner.

Skeeters Are Ready

The fiery Skeeters, who have feuded with the Eagles all season, probably will be at their roughest and toughest in their bid for victory tonight. Bus Portland, Hughie Bell, Eddie and Syd May, Bud Goodfellow, Percy Nichols and Bill McGregor will be numbered among the determined invaders tonight.

Alvis Watches Buddy Baer In Workout

Special Dispatch to The Post

Lakewood, N. J., March 27.—Ray Alvis and Mike Jacobs, corraters of the Tony Galento-Buddy Baer bout April 8 in Washington, spent the day here in the latter's training camp and watched Buddy Baer batter three training partners.

The younger of the battling Baer brothers met up with Big Jim Howell, Elza Thompson and Joe O'Gatty and looked good against all three, staggering the first two and forcing O'Gatty to retire with a cut eye after two rounds.

Alvis signed Herbie Katz for one of the preliminary spots on the Galento-Baer card and spent part of the day with Jacobs lining up outside shows for Washington this summer that are expected to make the Nation's Capital one of the outstanding fight centers.

Alvis hoped to have Baer wind up his training grind in the District, but Buddy's manager, Ancil Hoffman, objected on the grounds that the setup was perfect in Lakewood and he wanted to take advantage of all the facilities.

Alvis and Jacobs returned to New York after the workout, where the District promoter hoped to sign an opponent for Jimmy DeChard, the promising former Washington amateur who will make his pro debut on the April 8 card.

Rock Creek's 'Early Birds' Elect White

Dr. W. B. White, a charter member, was elected president of Rock Creek's Early Bird Club in the annual meeting and election held last night at the Rock Creek Club. Tom Meaney was elected vice president and Gorman Prince secretary-treasurer.

Dr. White, with several friends, organized the Early Birds Club in 1925 and the members have been playing at sunup through the spring, summer and fall months since that time. Dr. White is also handicap chairman, with all allowances in the form of bisques.

Plans were completed for the S. G. Loeffler Trophy play, with competition starting Monday or Tuesday. The plaque and 12 nameplates will remain in competition for two years, with one tournament a month six months a year. A member will be allowed only one victory a year.

Arlington Maccabees In Practice Sessions

The Arlington Maccabees baseball team, which will play in the Departmental and Washington-Virginia Leagues this year, will practice twice this weekend, tomorrow afternoon at 1:30 and Sunday morning at 10:30. Players interested in making the team should report promptly at Ballston Stadium either or both times.

200 Ice Fans Pay Tribute To Eagles

Over 200 ice hockey fans invaded the Continental Room of the Continental Hotel last night to pay an impressive tribute to the Eastern Hockey League champion Washington Eagles with a testimonial dinner.

The championship players were introduced, collectively and individually, by Master of Ceremonies Ray Michael and each responded to his introduction with a brief response.

Coach Redvers Mackenzie, Owner S. G. Loeffler, sr., and defenseman Leo Burrage and high scoring Norm Burns were singled out for prolonged ovations after being introduced by Michael.

Paul Courteau, the "Flying Frenchman" with the keen sense of humor, responded to his introduction in fluent and flowing French which he later translated into English.

Hit of the night, however, was 9-year-old Mascot Walter Sands, who, perched high upon the chair where all the world could hear, said:

"I like this team. I hope to be back as mascot again next season!"

heretofore held in Spokane, Wash., as the highlight of the Skins' training season.

The San Diego development caused mild surprise here as it has been generally understood that the Redskins would return to Spokane for the third successive year.

Coach Ray Flaherty, whose home is in Spokane, was instructed by wire last night to make a flying visit to the new training site to inspect its facilities before making his cross-country flight to arrive here next Monday. Later in the week he will go with Marshall and Espey to the annual meeting of the National Football League in Chicago.

Ideal Place to Train

From what he observed, Marshall declared, the Redskins will find in San Diego the most ideal training conditions they ever have enjoyed. Of particular value to the team's conditioning is San Diego's lack of rain which should make possible the maximum number of work-outs.

It will be the first time in the history of professional football that a National League team has trained in the State of California, and the experiment will be watched with interest by other clubs of the league with the possibility that more clubs will train in California next year.

Jim Turnesa, Golf Pro, Called by Army Draft

Asheville, N. C., March 27 (U.P.).—The Army today called Jim Turnesa, 24, youngest professional in the family of golfers, in the draft and he left for his home at Elmsford, N. Y., to take a physical examination. He was playing in the Land of Sky Open.

Miss Kirby, Mrs. Page Win At Pinehurst

Pinehurst, N. C., March 27 (AP).—Dorothy Kirby, of Atlanta, beat Elizabeth Hicks, of Long Beach, Calif., 4 and 3, and Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, Chapel Hill, downed Mrs. William Hockenjos, jr., of Lake Hopatcong, N. J., 6 and 4, in semi-final matches today in the North and South Women's Golf Championship.

The two Southern players, Miss Kirby and Mrs. Page, will play the final tomorrow as they did a year ago in this championship when Mrs. Page won.

Miss Hicks, who won the medal with a fine 71, saw her game collapse today against Miss Kirby. She could not hit the ball straight and after winning the first hole lost four running, three of these because of bad second strokes and the other when Miss Kirby holed a long putt for a birdie three.

Western High Baseball Team Lists 12 Games

Veterans will be available for almost every position on the baseball team of Western High, which yesterday announced a 12-game schedule for the season, starting April 4.

Though Carmel Nance, the Red Raiders' ace moundsman, has been lost by graduation, Billy Gray, Clarence Kuldel and Charley Hines are returning. Teddy Bright will again do the catching with the decision of Jake Hilleary not to play, and in the infield will be Bob Leach, first; Bob Cochrell, second, and Jimmy Karas, third. Holdover fielders will be Bernie Cady and Jim Malarky.

Thus Western's Coach Cliff Moore needs only a shortstop and one outfielder to put a complete experienced nine on the field. These will be drawn from a bumper crop of promising youngsters now going through daily drills with the Raiders.

First game on the schedule will be with National Training School, after which the Raiders will take on last year's interhigh champion Central team on April 9.

The Schedule

April 4—At National Training; 9—Central; 25—Anacostia; 26—At Briarley; 29—Calvin Coolidge.

May 2—At Eastern; 7—At Episcopal; 9—W. Wilson; 10—At Randolph-Macon M. A.; 14—Washington-Lee; 16—At Tech; 20—At Roosevelt.

Baer's Pilot Declines Offer of Louis Bout

New York, March 27 (AP).—Ancil Hoffman, manager of Max Baer, today declined an offer from Promoter Mike Jacobs to sign for a September bout between the California heavyweight and Champion Joe Louis providing Baer whips Lou Nova here next week.

Hoffman said he would rather have Baer meet Billy Conn in June with the winner to go against Louis, but Jacobs pointed out Conn already was slated to meet the champion that month. There also was some talk that Buddy Baer might get a crack at Louis in August if he knocks out Tony Galento in their May engagement.

start. A kids team, and youth may be served for a change. Don't bet too much on them, for kids usually don't come through, but these are kids who have been case hardened by good apprenticeships in the Cardinal chain gang. Better watch them, especially if their start is good.

GIANTS—The finest tribute that can be paid to the Giants is that Milton Chapman, manager of the Miami-Biltmore Hotel, says that they are the best behaved group of athletes he ever had in his hotel. A thoroughly house-broken, well-mannered, ageing crew which should succumb to the pull of gravity from the second division without a skirmish. Hartnett's gabbiness may stir their temperate livers a little but not enough to make them a good 40 to 1 shot.

PHILLIES—It can be said without the slightest hesitation that this monumentally inept team will play 154 games this season and will never use more than nine men on the field at one time. Home games will be played in Philadelphia and the triumph of the season will be the development of a player who by comparison will look so good that he will be sold for $100,000. Some crude soul has inquired, "What place is there for the Phillies in baseball?" The answer, of course, is eighth place. They'll fit into that slot as neatly as the last cogwheel fits into the industry triumphant jig-saw.

Time and geography stod in the way of our inspecting the Cubs, Pirtes, Bees, White Sox, Browns and Athletics. But we are collecting data on them, by means of Indian runners and smoke signals and will soon render an exhausting survey of their chances—if we can ever break our crystal ball of a nasty habit of always mirroring a Scotch and soda.

Previous to 1933, those fishermen who went offshore at Ocean City, Md., used small skiffs off the beach.

ACKERMAN

That year a storm blew through the narrow strip of sand that separates Sineapuxent Bay and the Atlantic and made not only an inlet, but one of the greatest marlin-fishing ports on the Eastern Seaboard.

Without help, to keep open, these inlets have a habit of closing, and that is just what parts of the channel are doing now—north, into the Isle of Wight Bay, the volume of water is already greatly diminished. If this condition is allowed to continue it will soon seriously affect the entrance.

Army engineers plan a survey for this summer, but those interested should not become lax about this promise, but continue to work for improvement of the entire inlet, for with a good one, Ocean City, in the next ten years, will become the mecca of thousands of fishermen from all parts of the East.

Don Carpenter, local fishing scribe, has just published a fishing handbook that anglers will find not only interesting, but filled with fishing lore; and, because of its size, handy to carry in the tackle box.

Don has fished all over the country and knows fishes and their ways as it is given to but a few to know them—and how to get them on the business end of a line.

On Wednesday, according to a telegram from the Stuart Sailfish Club, the tight schools of sailfish that have been off St. Lucie Inlet all winter went wild again, and were savagely striking at any bait offered. Several hundred were hooked and 93 boated.

There are several ideas for the reason for these fish schooling here all winter—one that there is great quantities of bait fish present to hold them. Another, and this is brought out by Miami and Miami Beach boatmen, that the great amount of sewage being dumped off the latter place is the reason for the fish leaving this area.

It seems as though such a community as Miami Beach could afford at least partial treatment for its sewage, particularly in view of the fact it is this water, and the air above it, which is the reason for the popularity of the resort.

Duck stamps, purchased annually by over a million sportsmen to finance waterfowl conservation, will serve a double purpose by extending conservation into Canada if everyone will cooperate by sending them to Ducks Unlimited, 342 Madison Avenue, New York City, when they become invalid on June 30.

This organization, confining its work to the breeding grounds of waterfowl, will resell them to philatelists and, while the sale of any one or a few stamps would mean little, thousands of them should gross a worthwhile amount.

Ours, license and all, is on its way now. How about sending yours in, too.

Gun Shoot Held

Westernport, Md., March 27.—Westernport Gun Club staged its first trap shoot of the season with 20 shooters participating. P. Nycum, Ridgeley, W. Va., and W. Whitefield, Westernport, took top honors by shattering 91 out of 100. T. Francis, Westernport, was runner-up with 90 in the 100-bird event.

Walton League Acts to Guard Sports Assets

More than 200 sportsmen and conservationists of the Izaak Walton League in convention here yesterday were enjoined to preserve "those things which make this country worth living in and fighting for."

The speaker, J. Hammond Brown, president of the Outdoor Writers Association of America, said an organization of sportsmen has been established to protect the Potomac River from exploitation for private gain.

Tappan Gregory, of Chicago, president of the league, asked the organization to combat what he called "wasteful and ill-considered" raids on forests and inland waters in "the guise of national defense."

Representative Karl Mundt (Republican), of South Dakota, author of pending legislation to create a division of water pollution control under the U. S. Public Health Service, told the convention that public health and natural resources constitute the first line of national defense."

Speaking on "Pennsylvania's Hunting Grounds and Refuge System," Seth Gordon, executive director, Pennsylvania Game Commission, observed that "one frequent fault found . . . in studying various refuge systems is that many of them are refuges on paper only."

The program today, beginning at 9:30 a. m. in the Willard Hotel, will include the following addresses: "What About the Striped Bass?" by Dr. Lewis Radcliffe, vice president of the Washington league; "Public Rights in Water," a panel discussion led by Tom Wallace, editor of Louisville Times, and "People's Rights in Rivers," by Chester E. McCarty, of Portland, Oreg. The annual banquet will be held at 7 p. m. The sessions continue through tomorrow.

G. U. Closes Ice Season Against All-Stars Sunday

Georgetown University's ice hockey team closes its 1940-41 season at Riverside Stadium Sunday night at 8:15 o'clock, when it faces Chet Adair's undefeated Collegiate All Stars.

The Hoyas lost their first game of the season before 3,800 fans at Riverside last Saturday night, when they were shut out by Penn, 3-0, but otherwise boast an imposing two-year record.

Ancient Glove Preferred by Lou Boudreau

By the Associated Press

Fort Myers, Fla., March 27.—Most ancient among equipment items packed by the Cleveland Indians tonight on the eve of their northward departure was Lou Boudreau's glove.

The crack shortstop still uses the glove he bought while playing in high school. It's been patched and repatched, but Lou still prefers it to a new one.

The squad will leave tomorrow for Atlanta, meeting the Southern Association club there Saturday.

Bruins Even Hockey Series With Leafs

By the Associated Press

Toronto, March 27.—The Boston Bruins evened their semi-final series for hockey's coveted Stanley Cup tonight by edging out the Toronto Maple Leafs, 2 to 1, but the triumph was tempered by the reinjury of Bill Cowley, their scoring center star.

Cowley, who set a new National League record for assists this season, was hurt as Boston won the opening game of the series a week ago tonight. He was unable to play in the second and third games, both of which the Bruins lost, and tonight skated onto the ice with his knee tightly taped.

In his second turn in the first period Cowley was checked, apparently lightly, by Defenseman Jack Church and fell to the ice in pain. A quick examination showed that he had seriously aggravated the previous injury and he not only was unable to continue in the game, but was feared lost for the remainder of the playoffs.

Cain Scored

The winning goal was scored by Herbie Cain in the ninth minute of the final period and precipitated a furious dispute around the Toronto nets because the red signal light had not flashed immediately. Goalie Turk Broda had stopped one shot by Cain with his chest, but the speedy winger picked up the rebound and banged it in. The pay-off play was started by a rinkwide pass from Pat McCreavy, who got credit for an assist.

A crowd of 14,824 fans saw the Bruins push into the lead early in the second period as porky Dumart scored on a perfect pass from Milt Schmidt.

Wings Beat Hawks, 3-1

Detroit, March 27.—The Detroit Red Wings defeated the Chicago Black Hawks, 3 to 1, tonight to take the first game of the semi-final round of the Stanley Cup Playoffs, the world series of National League hockey.

The first Red goal was scored a split second before the close of the first period by Abel on his own rebound. Grosso and Howe were given assists.

George Washington Nine Opens Today Against Ohio State

Game Slated For Ellipse At 2:30 P.M.

5 Former District High School Players On G. W. Club; Md. To Play Tomorrow

Sporting five former District high school players in the starting line-up, George Washington University's baseball team will open the local college diamond season today against Ohio State on the Ellipse at 2:30 o'clock.

The Buckeyes, fresh from more than a week's play in the South, will have a big edge in condition and experience on the Colonials. Ohio State's three-game winning streak was ended yesterday with an 8-7 defeat at the hands of the Richmond Spiders, Southern Conference champions.

McGinnis May Hurl

Coach Ed Morris will not name a definite starting pitcher until just before game time, but his choice is expected to be Frank McGinnis, who played high school ball for Western. Eddie Amendola, the varsity courtman, and Red Kloak, both right-handers, may also see action.

The Colonials will line up like this: George Oertel, jr., centerfield; "Zip" Zimmerman, second base; Bobby Gilman, shortstop; Roy McNeil, first; Len Sokol, right; Jack Fitzgerald, third, and Scott Gudmundson, left. Either Johnny Picco or Jimmy Dowd will do the catching and bat in the eighth slot, followed by the pitcher.

3 Games Next Week

McGinnis, Oertel, Zimmerman, McNeil and Sokol are all local high school products.

G. W. has three home games next week, all on the Ellipse, Vermont on Monday, Harvard, Tuesday, and V. M. I. Friday.

Maryland Also Opens Against Ohio Tomorrow

Six home-state boys, all members of last year's team, will open for Maryland University's nine when Ohio State invades College Park tomorrow afternoon at 2:30.

Coach Burt Shipley will start either Max Hunt or Art Woodward against the Buckeyes, while all boys filling the other positions saw service with the team that won 11 and lost 9 last year.

Whipp to Lead Off

Roscoe Whipp, second baseman, will lead off followed by Lieb McDonald, second; Ashton Garrett, right; Mearle Duvall or Frank Dwyer, first; Bill England, center; Fritz Maisel or Carl Cline, left; Dick McHale, short, and Jim Wharton, catcher.

England, a District student; Hunt, a Pennsylvanian, and Dick McHale, of the District, are the only non-State boys on the team.

For additional pitchers Shipley has Bill Fulton, a southpaw, and Jim Mead. Dwyer and England could be pressed into service on the mound in a pinch.

Big Ninth Inning Beats Buckeyes, 8-7

Richmond, Va., March 27 (AP).—Charlie Woolard's double with the bases loaded in the ninth inning gave the University of Richmond Spiders an 8-to-7 victory over Ohio State in a weird game on Millhiser Field today. For the Buckeyes the defeat was the first of their Southern invasion.

Although outhit 10 to 5, the Spiders took advantage of a leaky Buckeye infield and the wildness of two of the three hurlers who toiled for the visitors.

A walk to little Walter (Sonny) Wholey, Spider second sacker, opened the Richmond half of the fateful ninth. Charlie Miller, the pitcher who was finally credited with the victory, flied out to center field, but John Lohrey walked Ned Butcher and hit big Andy Frohnczek in the ribs, filling the bases.

Lohrey went to the showers and gangling Earl Kendle replaced him. He shoved one strike past Woolard, but the rookie third baseman caught hold of a fast one and drove it far into left field. It could easily have cleared the bases but the Spiders needed only two runs.

Overlin Scores TKO Over Kellum In Vermont Bout

By the Associated Press

Barre, Vt., March 27.—Ken Overlin, 162, of Washington, world middleweight boxing champion, scored a technical knockout over Larry Kellum, 164-pound Montanan, tonight in the fourth round of a scheduled ten-round nontitle bout.

Overlin had the edge all the way, sending Kellum to the canvas once in the second and four times in the third round. The bout was stopped in the fourth after Overlin sent Kellum down again with a pile-driving right.

Al Houghton Back—Ready for Golf Wars

D. C. Champ Appears as Real Threat; Public Links Managers Switch Clubs

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Browner than a sun-lamp salesman and with an average of 36-holes a day under his belt, Al Houghton came back to town yesterday and put in a busy day at Beaver Dam.

The District Open champion, who has been with Bob Barnett at Indian Creek, just outside Miami, since mid-November, spent the day stocking his golf shop and preparing for the weekend.

Houghton, as playing professional, had a fine season at the exclusive Miami course and hopes to return next year. He played at least two 18-hole rounds almost every day and was consistently around par on the wind-swept layout, his last two rounds being 69 and 67.

HOUGHTON

The Beaver Dam pro, without an assistant this year as Stan Johnson leaves for Wilmington, Del., tomorrow to accept another position, hopes to name Walter Bogley as his aide. Bogley has been playing at Kenwood for some time and has gained a reputation as one of the longest hitters in town.

According to Houghton, Barnett will leave Miami April 8 by plane for the British War Relief match April 10 at Chevy Chase. Al Jamison and Claggett Stevens will remain until the course closes May 1. Stevens will then go to Richmond, Ind., while Jamison is undecided as to his summer connections. Houghton said he would make a place on his staff for him if Jamy was interested.

Houghton's continuous golf over the summer months bodes no good for the Middle Atlantic professionals this season as Al dominated the competition here last year after an idle winter. He is in his best condition now and well on his game.

Houghton decided at the last minute to pass up the Asheville Open in favor of getting back on the job by the first of April.

Publinx Managers Shift Around

The three major public links courses will shift managers this morning, Tommy Doerer moving back to East Potomac, Harry Graham back to Rock Creek and Al Farr taking over at Anacostia.

Doerer, who has been at Rock Creek since last spring, will go back to his old position as manager of the downtown course with Joe Micker as assistant manager. Len Burrage, the Eagles' hockey ace, will take over the starting tee, replacing Chick Farr, who is now on the police force.

Graham will move back to his old stamping grounds, Rock Creek, with Johnny Welch remaining there as his assistant.

Al Farr, who has been with the S. G. Leoffler organization for several years, will assume the managerial position at Anacostia, with Wayne Owen as his assistant.

Mrs. John M. Smith was honor guest at a reception given by a group of women golfers at Argyle Club last night. Mrs. Smith worked with her husband as manager for 14 years.

Mrs. Shirley Chamblin and Mrs. F. L. Williams were cochairmen of the affair. Afternoon golf was followed by a buffet supper and meeting at which Mrs. Smith received a gift.

Sons of Pericles Courtmen Leave For Championship

Members of the local chapter, Order of Sons of Pericles, left last night for Pittsburgh to participate in the second annual National Sons of Pericles basketball tournament at the University of Pittsburgh. Teams representing chapters in the East and Midwest will play in the event which was held in Chicago last year and won by the Pittsburgh chapter.

The Washington team is tied with Bliss Electrical School in the Roosevelt Recreation League. The playoffs will be played next week upon the team's return. Local schoolboys compose the team: Mike Ballos, Lewis Chaconas, Jimmy Karas, Jello Lagos, Bobby Mandris, Gus Plakas, Lou Rados, Petro Peratino and Connie Pappas, who is in charge.

Marion A. C. Clinches Cage Second Half

Marion A. C. clinched the second-half championship in the D. C. Recreation Basketball League at Roosevelt gym last night, beating the Corner Cafe five by an 18-14 count with Kemp leading the attack.

Other games on the same floor saw Pincus Grill trip Christ Church, 17-12, and Finnish Americans beat Bliss Electrical School, 26-22. At Central Air Duct turned back the Ramblers, 28-20, and the D. C. Silents bowed to Census Ranchers, 23-20.

Three games were played at Tech gym with the Arlington Macabees leading the way with a 35-25 beating of Call Radio. Jewish Community Center defeated Bellman Fuel, 27-23, and P. W. A. noosed out Friendship House, 23-21.

'Wrong-Way' Shaw Embarrassed After Forced Landing

By the Associated Press

Douglas, Ariz., March 27.—Wilbur Shaw, famed race driver missing overnight on a flight from Dallas, flew his plane here today from Nacozari, Sonora, Mexico, blushing from "the most embarrassing incident of my life."

Shaw became lost late yesterday, made a forced landing in a field north of the mining town of Nacozari, 60 miles below Douglas, about dark and spent the night with American mine owners.

You see I have always considered that I was a top navigator and I turned out to be one of the worst," Shaw said. "It truly was the most embarrassing incident of my life."

Table Tennis Heads Iron Out Meet Details

With the deadline approaching for entries in the 1941 District of Columbia table tennis championships, scheduled for Saturday afternoon at the Chevy Chase Ice Palace courts, Carl Meininger, president of the local body, is busily engaged arranging the last details for the event.

In an announcement of particular interest to local table tennisers, Meininger said that the D. C. T. T. A. will send the women's and men's champions to compete in the national meet which will be held in New York on April 2, 3 and 4. All expenses will be defrayed by the association, according to Meininger.

Last Tourney

The coming tournament is the last ranking affair of the season, Meininger states, and its results will weigh considerably in determining the standings of players. The event is open only to members of the local association as, being of ranking importance, only members are eligible.

The tournament is a definite threat to the champions, local officials state, as such stars as Elias Schuman, formerly District No. 1 player and now holding down No. 2 sport; Lou Gorin, No. 3 ranking player; Jimmy Limerick, Jimmie Shea and others, are playing a vastly improved brand of table tennis and Stanley Fields will be pressed to retain his No. 1 rating. Carolyn Wilson, local women's champion and Eastern queen, has several fights on her hands with Polly Wofsey and Nancy Cross looming as likely contenders.

Local D. C. T. T. A. officials headed by Carl and John Meininger will be in complete charge of the tournament and interested players may get in touch with them or Lou Fields, Ice Palace courts manager, where the event will be staged. Tickets for both sessions, the first for Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock and the finals commencing at 8 Sunday night, are on sale at the AAA, Sports Center and the Ice Palace table tennis courts.

Baseball League Gets Eleven Bids

Eleven applications have been made for franchises in the newly formed Washington-Virginia Night Baseball League, which will play its games on the Ballston Stadium field. The league will probably operate with eight clubs.

The following have been elected officials of the night league, which will open its season Sunday, April 20: J. R. Grantham, president; Norman Outcault, secretary, and M. C. Windsor, treasurer.

Miami, March 27.—Today's deal that brought Steve Sundra to the Nats from the Yankees, may be the forerunner of another deal for a pitcher. . . . The Nats, by virtue of finishing seventh last season, has second shot at any players placed on the waiver lists by other clubs. . . . It was a coincidence that both Sundra and Ben Chapman landed with the Nats on their birthdays. . . . There are 13 fewer players wearing Washington uniforms as a result of a wholesale pruning of rookie talent today. . . . Outfielder Joe Mellendeck, Catcher Dick Hahn, Pitchers Alex Zukowski, Hardin Cathey, Dick Poydock and Carleton Twyble were released to the Nats' Charlotte farm. . . . Mellendeck failed to show the Nats enough hitting ability. . . . Jimmy Robertson, nephew of Clark Griffith, was released to the Nats' Orlando team in the Class D Florida League. . . . He is a shortstop who is taking his first fling at organized ball. . . . His brother, Sherrard Robertson, also a shortstop, will make the trip North with the Nats but will be returned to the Charlotte club. . . . A recent ruling by Judge Landis decrees that all purchased rookies be retained by the club until at least April 1, to insure them a fair trial. . . . Bucky Harris plans to carry nine pitchers and that list now seems to comprise Hudson, Leonard, Chase, Sundra, Masterson, MacFayden, Anderson, Carrasquel and Jim Dean. . . . Sam Cunningham and Joe Beck will be retained perhaps, until the club must get down to the 25 player limit on May 15. . . . They could oust Carrasquel and Dean from jobs on the staff. . . . Dean will get a crucial test tomorrow when the Nats open their three-game stand in Miami with a game against the Phillies. . . . Dean and Leonard will share the Washington pitching. . . . On Saturday and Sunday, the Nats meet the Giants here. . . . Silver Threads Among the Patients:

Pieces of Haight

Washington, D. C.

Dear Boss:

I'm not feeling so hot. I don't know if I have the painter's colic from trying to work while those guys on ladders were renovating the Sports Department, or if I have a sneak preview of spring fever, or if I'm just worn out from running to the window to see if the finance company is going to use our car today. Anyway, I'm trying to write this letter at home.

HAIGHT

You've heard that poem that goes "'Twas the night before Christmas and all through the house, not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse, etc." Well, try to think of an exact opposite to those lines, toss in two boiler factories, add three fog horns and multiply the total by 26,401 and you have some idea what I'm up against.

My wife is running the vacuum, the Frigidaire is pumping, the radio is blaring, the washing machine is going, the oil burner is buzzing, the doorbell is clanging, the phone is ringing—I don't mind the noise, Boss, it's the overhead I'm thinking about. Don't let that give you any ideas, if you know what I mean.

I can't get myself organized for one of those long-drawn-out pieces so I'm going to just pot around. For instance, I went to the doctor's office this morning. That's an interesting place, Boss. You walk in, find ten people sitting around waiting. Everybody looks up and with a "I wonder what's the matter with him" stare.

The secretary takes your name and then you join the sitdown strike going on in the other room. You park there, look at your fingernails, try to get a piece of bacon from between your teeth without attracting attention and straighten your tie. You fidget around and then your eyes land on an ash tray. Boss, that means you've got to smoke. So you light up one. The matronly looking woman at the east end of the davenport puts her handkerchief up to her mouth and sneaks you a couple of dirty looks. So you put out the cigarette and begin thinking about all the things that could be wrong with you.

I don't know why it is, Boss, but there seems to be a law against talking above a whisper in a doctor's waiting room. It's O. K. for the doctor to talk loud and laugh hard. Babies can cry lustily, but the mature customers must sit around as if they were waiting for the undertaker to nail on the lid.

Well, Boss, you look at your watch and discover you have missed your favorite radio program. You wonder why doctor's don't put radios in their waiting rooms. Then you see a rack of magazines over in the corner. So you pick up one and start looking at the pictures. Finally, you find an article that is appealing. You get all wrapped up in what you are reading and you come to "continued on Page 58."

You rustle the pages and get to page 58 and find that the part you wanted to read has been torn out . . . probably had a receipt on the other side. You are feeling bad enough about it, but you are burning up when you see that your plight is public property.

Then you just sit. Time marches on. Minutes, hours, days, weeks, months and years—finally the secretary beckons to you. You try to get up and find your knees are rheumatic, your beard is gray down to your waist and your teeth are gone. The secretary sees you need assistance so she rolls in a wheelchair, hands you an ear trumpet, wraps your legs in a blanket and you're off to the front room to see the doctor.

He greets you like a long lost brother. You adjust your ear trumpet to try to catch what he's saying. He asks, "What horse do you like in the fifth race today at Sterling Park?"

You tell the doctor that you never heard of that track and he replies, "Where have you been? Congress passed a District racing bill back in 1939. The track's down on Secretary Ickes' front lawn."

The doctor laughs it off and comes toward you with an armful of instruments. "Now what's wrong with you?" he asks.

"I guess I'm in the wrong place, Doc," you reply in a squeaky voice. "Would you be so kind as to call W. W. Chambers?"

Well, as I said in the first place, I'm just potting around. I want to thank the budding journalists at Georgetown University for giving me publicity in their "Hoya."

I want to go on record as liking those open heel shoes the women are wearing, but I wish more of the gals would wear stockings that fit at the heels.

I'd like to help if somebody wants to hang the guy who thought of that idea of putting the striking place on the wrong side of those paper matches. I've struck out 14 times while writing this.

Better pass along the word that this is the last call for the Walter Haight Club contest. Send in rhymes and dimes, gals and pals.

I hope members liked the cards. I want everybody to stand up for their rights, too. Just flash your card, Boss, and go right on with your story.

POUNDS HAIGHT.

P. S.—Boss, if that doctor phones in about how long it takes for me to pay my bill, say nothing. I will see you later. W. H.

Carl Brumbaugh Named Line Coach At Boston College

By the United Press

Newton, Mass., March 27.—Carl Brumbaugh, former player and scout for the Chicago Bears professional football team, will be the new backfield coach at Boston College, Head Coach Denny Myers announced tonight.

Brumbaugh, 34, is a native of West Milton, Ohio, and played football at Ohio State and the University of Florida before he began his professional football career. He coached at West Virginia for a short period.

While at the University of Florida in 1928, Brumbaugh gained fame in a game with Auburn by making touchdown runs of 35, 60 and 85 yards within seven minutes.

16-Year-Old Tops Petworth Pin Session

A 16-year-old youngster, "Pret" Wannan, currently starring on the Petworth Juniors, took most of the honors last night in the Petworth League when he showed all the men how it was done by rolling a splendid 406 set for his Bill Jawish Service Station. His mates collaborated to take team highs with a 846 game and a record set of 1,842, which added five sticks to the old top total. Larson, Trojan Displays, was best for the single with a 155 count. Sollers leads the league with 50-28, two games in front of City Awning.

ICE PALACE

Mary Frownfelter, Robins, had 124 for top game in the Connecticut Avenue Ladies League and led her team to highs of 491 and 1,381 although they had to divide the game honors with the Penguins. Sis Dent, Blue Birds, once more led for high individual set with a 322 count. The Orioles lead the league with 44-28 while the Pelicans, Robins and Cardinals each have 41-31 to tie for the runner-up spot.

BROOKLAND

Dave Mulquin was the happiest man in the Brookland Merchants League last night, for he not only took high game honors with 159 but had his first experience as a member of the "400 Club," totaling exactly 400, only to see Teammate Ray Watson win out by topping him 30 sticks. Both big counts helped their University Delicatessen quintet win high team game with 1,865, a record for the season by 15 sticks. Shadid's Restaurant took the single with 638.

N. E. TEMPLE

The Friends League found Lipski, Balms, again in the limelight with his 131-384, which were high for the night. The Butterflies took the team honors after pinfalls of 553 and 1,616.

Nats Purchase Steve Sundra From Yankees

the winter of 1935 when he was part of a trade between the Yankees and Indians. In that swap, the principal figures were Johnny Allen and Monte Pearson. Sundra was thrown into the deal for Allen for the Indians like the thirteenth bun in a baker's dozen.

General Manager George Weiss of the Yankee farm system had insisted that Sundra be tossed into the deal by the Yankees. Cleveland offered little objection.

Weiss had seen Sundra pitch in the low minors and detected big league talent in the fellow. In 1939, Sundra proved a better pitcher than either Allen or Pearson, who were the main excuses for the deal.

Sundra will join the Washington Club at Orlando tomorrow. The deal that brought him to the Nats was concluded this morning in long distance telephone negotiations between Griffith and Barrow. Sundra thus misses the Nats' three-day trip to Miami.

Bucky Harris is at a loss to understand Sundra's fall from grace with the Yankees or his meager four victories of last season. "He was newly married before the start of last season and in the past bridegroom pitchers have had bad years," Harris pointed out. "The Yanks used him mostly as a relief man and he lost his starting job when young Ernie Bonham started winning so consistently for the Yanks."

Harris' own pitching plans now have taken definite shape. Dutch Leonard, Ken Chase, Sid Hudson and Sundra will be his starting pitchers at the outset of the season.

Tropical Feature Captured by Tower Stable's Royal Man

Paul Ryan Rides Victor; Shot Put 2d

Corydon Is Third In Southland Race; Winner Pays $6.50 For Each $2

By the Associated Press

Tropical Park, Fla., March 27.—Blanket finishes were frequent here today and one of them came with the running of the Southland Purse, the mile and a sixteenth piece de resistance of the program. Royal Man, from the Tower Stable, garnered the chief portion of the purse by a half length under Paul Ryan. Mrs. Marie Evans' Shot Put, last year's long-distance king, earned the place, a head before Mrs. Payne Whitney's Corydon. W. C. Stroube's Sirasia was barely edged out of the picture.

The winner, Shot Put and Sirasia are prominent eligibles for the $10,000 Tropical Handicap of closing day.

Royal Man returned $6.50 for $2 and covered the distance in 1:43 1-5.

Shot Put's race was most impressive. The Chance Shot gelding showed his usual lack of early foot, but the manner in which he was running over horses through the short stretch indicates that he will be a hard one to beat in the Tropical Handicap. He apparently has regained his finest edge.

Sirasia showed the way and Ryan decided to ease Royal Man back off the brisk pace. Master Key and Corydon had flings at the leader. As they entered the home lane, it was Sirasia, Corydon and Royal Man fighting for command. Then Shot Put staged his typical rally. He just failed to catch the game Royal Man.

INDIAN PENNY, pinched back leaving the backstretch, slipped through on the inside entering the stretch, closed gamely to punishment and outlasted the others. The latter gained steadily while circling the field in the final furlongs to finish strongest of all.

HIGH PLAID, on the inside in the early running, swung wide turning into the stretch and held the others safe.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds; claiming. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:35½. Off at 3:36½. Winner, P. Bieber's b. c. Whirlaway to Run in Derby, Says Trainer

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., March 27.—Trainer Ben Jones, far from dismayed by Whirlaway's poor showing this winter, said today the Warren Wright colt definitely would run in the Kentucky Derby, with three or more tune-up races before then.

Whirlaway, champion juvenile of 1940 and the early Derby winter-book favorite, won his 3-year-old debut, finished third in his second start and was scratched from the $20,000-added Flamingo Stakes after developing a leg ailment.

He again ran third in the Miami Springs Purse at Tropical Park last Saturday and has been entered in another race tomorrow.

Selections at Tropical Park

Dear Al:

I was talking to Dave Woods, who beats the publicity drums for Pimlico, yesterday. He said that A. G. Vanderbilt's Good Turn will be ready to carry the mail at Bowie, but that New World is being brought along slowly. In fact, New World may not see action until the Withers Mile at Belmont which would mean he would miss the Derby and Preakness. Time will have to tell about Good Turn's chances of going in the Derby. The colt failed over a track he did not like in the Santa Anita Derby. The condition was heavy and holding. Discovery, Vanderbilt's stallion, has five representatives in the line-up for the Pimlico Oaks at the Baltimore track on May 3. This race is exclusively for 3-year-old fillies. Forty-two of the country's best have been named for this, the first great test over a distance of ground in the national schedule of filly classics. Taken from the 1940 2-year-old ranking, every top-flight young lady of this division is included in the list of nominations released today by the Maryland Jockey Club. Heading those expected to answer the bugle on May 3, the first Saturday of the spring meeting, is Crispin Oglebay's great daughter of Equipoise, Level Best. This filly, voted the best out in 1940, seems, at present writing, a certain starter in the Oaks. Level Best won six stakes last year, was second in two others, and third in another, for a total of $40,225. She not only showed her dainty heels to those of her own sex, but took the colts into camp on more than one occasion. However, it is not to be assumed because of these facts that Level Best is "home free." Plenty of competition is offered by the nominations listed below. Misty Isle, by Sickle out of Seven Pines, bred and owned by Joseph E. Widener, is herself the winner of three stakes last season, and the sum of $35,835. Valdina Myth, the lady from the plains of Texas, will carry the famous maroon and white silks of her owner-breeder, Emerson F. Woodward. This one piled up the sizable total of $41,625. She comes fresh from the West, and should be there or thereabouts when the judges give the final nod on the Pimlico Oaks. Four days to Bowie.

BILL.

First race—ASK ME seems to have found the right spot in the day's opening dash for juveniles. The Questionnaire youngster will be in charge of Eddie Arcaro and has worked well. AT LIBERTY has had plenty of education and will be close. PRECISION for the minor awards.

Second race—KLEIG LIGHT, with McCreary up, gets my call here. Has the speed and I look for a rousing effort. CUCKOO-MAN has a bit of class and will be in the thick of the battle. GOLD MESH is good now and belongs in the money circle here.

Third race—PAVILLON could be the right one in this rather open race. Gets only 108 pounds and will have Meade to do the urging. The combination gets my stamp of approval. WELL ALLRIGHT breaks off the rail and is dangerous. RUSTY GOLD for the show end.

Fourth race—MAELINE, another mount for Meade, seems the best of those gathered for this sprint. Shares top weight with other leading contenders and will do a lot of running. GALLANT STROKE, with Ryan up, is a threat. ANNIE ALONE for the third money.

Fifth race—BLUE LILY gets in with 107 pounds and will appreciate the abbreviated sprint distance. Needs only the right ride. ZACATINE has some class and belongs in the thick of contention. WHIRLAWAY has been disappointing and probably needs more route.

Sixth race—ART OF WAR may forget to stop and gather in a purse in a field of this sort. This one has worked well and deserves a chance. BONIFIED has plenty of dash and will be a keen factor despite 116 pounds. The same goes for MENTAL GIANT.

Seventh race—It's about time they put over EARLY SETTLER again. Breaks off the rail for this and the price should be right. WHITE HOT has done about everything asked and is dangerous. BIG BRANDS SON is as good as these splendid racers.

Eighth race—CALLING has everything it takes to win a race of this kind. I'm making him the best bet of the day. PATSEY BEGONE and AUTOGRAPH to take care of the place and show positions.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take UPSET DOVE, BLIND BARNEY and ALCA.

Best bet—CALLING.

seconds of the first round and Paul Scally, Penn State's veteran 175 pounder, who halted Wayne Shumate, of Superior Teachers, 55 seconds after the start of the second round.

John Nosed Out

The first real upset of the tournament came when Ed Cameron, of University of Miami, Coral Gables, Fla., won a close decision from Verdayne John, Wisconsin heavyweight, who was top-seeded along with Herbert Kendrick, of Louisiana State. Cameron outpunched the previously undefeated John in three bristling rounds.

The only other favorite to lose was Lenny Bartone, Catholic University 127-pounder, who was upset by Edwin Ourso, of Southwestern Louisiana.

Heavies Featured

The real thrills for the crowd of more than 1,000, however, were hard-punching exhibitions by Heavyweights Kendrick and Lou Campbell, of Southwestern Louisiana, that earned them second-round knockouts. Kendrick floored Don Campbell, of Lock Haven (Pa.) Teachers with a right to the solar plexus while the Southwestern Louisiana fighter dropped Stanley Mintz, City College of New York, with a right to the jaw and Referee Joe McGuigan halted the bout a few seconds later at 1:19.

Aside from the knockouts, the best bouts were those in which Bob Webber, of San Jose, decisioned Jack Gibson, of Wisconsin, in the 120-pound class and the 165-pound bout between Fenton Somerville, Eastern champion from Virginia, and Howard Briggs, of the California Aggies, in which Somerville won the decision. Fred Logsden, of Southwestern Louisiana, showed a fast left hand and a hard punch in decisioning Joe Gestowski, of Michigan State, in another 165-pound bout.

Capt. Harris To Take Course At Aberdeen

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Fort George G. Meade, Md., March 27.—Capt. Melvin B. Harris, of Washington, commanding the District's 104th Ordnance Company, will leave April 1 for Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., to attend a 30-day ordnance refresher course. Until his return, the company will be commanded by Lieut. William B. McGuire.

Before leaving, Capt. Harris has requisitioned a score of men from other units of the Twenty-ninth Division whose classification cards showed them to be skilled in specialties needed by the company. It will be more than doubled in strength by men from within the division and by skilled selectees.

The division's recreation program got under way last night with a dance in the recreation hall of the 111th Field Artillery of Virginia. Partners for the more than 350 men who attended were 35 Washington girls supplied by the District Defense Council and brought to Meade in special busses.

Capt. Coleman M. Anderson, of the 104th Medical Regiment, new division recreation officer, today outlined a schedule of entertainment arranged for units in their own recreation halls. The division service club, two theaters and hostess house will not be completed until after April 1.

Tomorrow, Capt. Anderson said, the 175th Infantry (Maryland) will have a dance with partners from Baltimore. A variety show will be given by the 111th Field Artillery, and the 176th Infantry, of Virginia, will send a show to the 176th Field Artillery (Pennsylvania), while giving another show in its own area. Maryland's 115th Infantry will see an exhibition boxing match.

With excellent weather so far this week, the division has made progress on its training schedule, delayed by rain, snow, wind and mud, and the number of colds has dropped off sharply. A considerable proportion of the division is still in quarantine for measles and mumps, with no apparent decline in new cases.

Mrs. Byron Maps Congress Race

Special Dispatch to The Post

Hagerstown, Md., March 27.—Mrs. Katherine E. Byron, widow of Congressman William D. Byron, who aspires for her husband's seat in Congress, is in Washington County this week conferring with Democratic leaders.

Mrs. Byron said she will solicit the support of the members of the Democratic State central committee here and is buttressing her fight for the nomination with petitions favoring her nomination.

She told party leaders here that she will push her campaign to the limit regardless of opposition, it being her desire, she said, to fill the post to help complete the program of her husband, who was killed in an airliner crash near Atlanta, Ga., about a month ago.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 27.—Charles Unger, of the county, paid a fine and costs in a magistrate's court here yesterday for failing to send his 15-year-old daughter, Arvella, to school in Gerardstown district.

It was stated the girl had been absent 26 days since the first of the year.

The father's excuse was that his daughter "had been called by the Lord to go out and preach the Gospel." It was indicated the girl had been appearing in connection with some religious services in Frederick County, Va., not far from her home in this county.

Alien Charge Is Invalid, Auhagen Says

Dr. Friedrich Ernst Auhagen asserted in the District Court yesterday that the indictment accusing him of failing to register as a Nazi propagandist was "vague, indefinite and uncertain." Through Attorney Roger Robb he asked that the charge be dismissed.

Dr. Auhagen withdrew his plea of not guilty to make the technical attack on the indictment.

The grand jurors said Dr. Auhagen, who has been prominent as a lecturer and writer, was acting for the Nazi Party and for German citizens. Among his propaganda activities was listed organization of the American Fellowship Forum.

Attorney Robb told the court in a memorandum of authorities that the indictment failed to charge an offense according to law, because in accusing the German publicist of failing to register there was no indication whether he violated the 1938 Registration Act or the 1939 amendment. Robb pointed out that the terms of the two acts were quite different.

Five Scouts Get Eagle Badges At Honor Court

Three George F. Myers—father, son and grandson—stepped forward together last night when the "middle Myers" received an Eagle badge, in an unusual family group at the Boy Scouts' Court of Honor at Eastern High School.

According to custom, five boys who received this honor had their badges pinned on them by their mothers. In contrast, George F. Myers, jr., himself a scoutmaster for Troop 66, had the pinning done by his father, while 8-year-old George 3d, mascot for the troop, stood proudly by.

Earlier in the program, Representative James E. Van Zandt (Republican), of Pennsylvania, reminisced about his own experiences in athletics and scouting. He ended with the message that "our country is faced with its greatest challenge . . . in what appears to be a total war.

"Before we realize it, we American people may be involved," and all Americans will be called on to make their contributions to defense, he said.

Twenty-nine scouts received the star award (based on five merit badges) and 11 the life award (based on 10 merit badges). Although 21 merit badges are required for the eagle award, Myers had 31. Smith Accuses Labor Board Of 'Purge'

By the Associated Press

Edwin S. Smith, member of the labor board, asserted yesterday that "loyal and efficient servants of the board" were being "purged" by his two board colleagues, Chairman Harry A. Millis and William M. Leiserson.

Shortly after an announcement by Millis listing field personnel shifts in board offices at Indianapolis, Milwaukee, Kansas City, Chicago, Cleveland, Denver, and Seattle, Smith made public a letter to Millis declaring that the changes were made to reward board employes in offices "which enjoy the special favor of Dr. Leiserson."

Millis' version was that the changes were made to gear up the field organization "to meet the needs of National Defense and the Nation's expanding industrial activity."

But Smith declared "that the whole proposal was deeply dyed with an attempt to accomplish a combined purge on a basis particularly agreeable to one member of the board.

Smith and Leiserson are known to have been at odds before over internal board problems, and when Millis was named chairman last November to succeed J. Warren Madden, reports arose that a reorganization of board policies and personnel would follow.

Millis issued a statement yesterday "categorically" denying improper motives. He added:

"Every transfer made was, in my considered judgment and that of Dr. Leiserson, for the good of the service. Mr. Smith by abdicating his duty as a board member and refusing to participate in discussion of the proposed changes, would seem in all good conscience to have forfeited any right to criticize the action thereafter taken in the matter."

Strike Curtails Auto Output During Week

By the Associated Press

Detroit, March 27.—The trade publication, Automotive News, today estimated car and truck output this week at 115,278 units compared with its estimate of 122,205 last week and of 105,013 this week a year ago.

The publication attributes the decline mainly to the effects of the strike in the Midland Steel Products Co. plants here. It adds that unless an "immediate settlement is made" in that dispute "widespread effect" in the automotive industry may be expected.

If the present production schedule is maintained through next Monday, the paper says, the production total for March will approximate 515,000 units, making a total for the first quarter of the year of 1,535,000 cars and trucks. The highest first quarter in the industry's history was 1,546,319 units manufactured in 1929.

Automotive News' survey shows General Motors output this week at 53,462 units, compared with 54,166 last week; Chrysler assemblies at 24,585, compared with 26,026, and Ford output, 20,000, compared with 26,172. The Ford Lincoln plant has been closed because of the shortage of frames normally supplied by the Midland Steel Products Co.

Sugar Futures

New York, March 27 (AP).—Bullish psychology in the raw sugar market was dented today by official Washington's critical attitude toward the recent wide runup in prices.

The domestic contract, under considerable pressure throughout, closed 3 to 4 points lower on sales of 27,200 tons. The world contract retreated sharply before a late rally fixed the final range ½ to 2 lower. Sales, 8,900 tons.

Raws were offered in moderate volume at 3.45 cents and some sugar was believed to be available a little under that figure. In the refined market the trade continued to receive orders at 5.10 cents.

The opinion here was that events had changed fundamentally the whole European outlook.

Favorable Labor News Stirs Smart Advance In Industrial Shares; Steels, Motors in Van

New York, March 27.—A little better brand of war news and favorable labor developments apparently imbued stock market buyers with more confidence today and long-lagging industrial leaders were lifted fractions to 2 points or so.

Upward tendencies prevailed at the start in fairly lively dealings. While rails lost some of the recent buoyancy and utilities hovered around their lows of the year, steels, motors and a wide assortment of senior issues attracted bidding throughout. Profits were cashed here and there in the final hour and prices in many instances finished under their tops.

The Associated press average of 60 stocks retained a net gain of .2 of a point at 41.6.

Market encouragement apparently was derived from the anti-Axis military coup in Yugoslavia and the action of defense authorities in ordering resumption of work at Allis-Chalmers plants where armament operations have been crippled for many weeks by strikes. Reports the Bethelehem Steel walk-out also might be near settlement were helpful. In addition, a batch of cheerful earnings statements and dividends aided sentiment.

Much interest was expressed in the private sale by underwriters after the close of 259,983 shares of Pennsylvania Railroad from British holdings. The stock closed up ⅛ at 24⅛ and was sold at this quotation. The offering was said to have quickly been oversubscribed.

Bolstering speculative spirits was today's figures disclosing a more than seasonal upturn in last week's freight loadings to the highest level for any like week since 1930.

Pullman shares ran up 2¼ points to 26½ on announcement the company had invited tenders for purchase of its shares up to $15,000,000. Continental Baking preferred advanced 4½ to 95 on reports recapitalization plans were being considered. This baking company issue recorded a new 1940 high, along with Santa Fe common and senior shares of Pere Marquette and Gulf, Mobile & Ohio.

On the advancing side were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet, Chrysler, General Motors, U. S. Rubber, Douglas Aircraft, American Telephone, Western Union, Southern Pacific, Savage Arms, N. Y. Shipbuilding, Kennecott, Westinghouse, American Can, Paramount and Bath Iron Works.

Secondary carrier loans led a forward swing in the bond department where transactions were the heaviest since early January.

Commodities were a trifle mixed. Wheat at Chicago was off ½ to 1 cents a bushel and corn unchanged to down ⅜. Cotton was up 20 to 25 cents a bale. Stocks at London recovered briskly in the wake of Balkan bulletins.

In the Curb modest improvement was registered for Gulf Oil, Bell Aircraft, Brewster Aero, American Cyanamid "B" and Pantepec. Turnover in the junior market was around 110,000 shares versus 123,000 yesterday.

Morgans at Odds With du Ponts on Rail Revamping

New York, March 27 (AP).—Two of the Nation's most powerful financial entities, the Morgans and the Du Ponts, were at odds today over the proposed reorganization of the Florida East Coast Railway.

A committee of holders of the road's first and refunding 5 per cent series "A" bonds, headed by A. M. Anderson, a partner of J. P. Morgan & Co., Inc., recently proposed a plan of reorganization.

The estate of Alfred I. du Pont countered with another plan which, boiled down, amounted to an offer of $4,000,000 for majority control of the railroad.

Anderson, on behalf of the bondholders' committee, retaliated with a statement last night in which he declared:

"The plan of capitalization proposed by the Du Pont estate is rigid and unworkable and, therefore, not feasible."

Among the angles of the case interesting to Wall Street was the fact that Morgan and Du Pont interests interlock in many financial ventures.

Cotton Futures

New York, March 27 (AP).—Demand for contracts in connection with trade and mill price fixing enabled cotton futures to stretch recent gains by 4 to 5 points today.

Full advances of about 8 points were halved by late professional profit selling plus some hedging. The market was responsive to favorable sentiment engendered in securities and other commodities based in part on the Yugoslavian uprising against the Axis pact.

Worth Street was relatively quiet with cotton cloth sales sharply restricted by a tight delivery situation. Another factor against turnover was Washington's close scrutiny of prices.

Exports Wednesday, 1,000 bales; season so far, 795,711. Port receipts, 4,688. Port stocks, 3,498,765.

Carrier Bonds Set New Highs; Trade Lively

By the Associated Press

New York, March 27.—Railroad bonds hit a new 1941 high on the average today in the most active market since the start of the year. Gains in the group ranged from small fractions to more than 2 points and most issues drew up to the closing barrier with all of the day's improvements intact despite profit taking forays in the afternoon.

In general corporates were higher although moderate selling continued in the low-yield group, forcing this class of bonds used in the Associated Press averages to a new 1941 low for the third day in a row. The rails and foreign issues used in the compilation both were at new highs for the year.

Transactions of $15,559,800, par value, were the largest since January 10 when railroad bonds likewise were enjoying wide patronage. The total compared with $12,364,700 Wednesday.

New high in carloadings for this period since 1930; continued reports of excellent earnings and developments in reorganization proceedings affecting a number of bankrupt carriers were news developments associated with the strength in rails.

Baltimore & Ohio convertibles of '60 raced up 1¼ points to 26 on unusual sales of $713,000, par value. St. Paul 5s added a half at 9½ on sales of $423,000; Missouri-Kansas-Texas 5s gained 2 1-8 at 28½ on sales of $319,000; St. Louis-San Francisco 4½s added ½ at 13⅜ on sales of $384,000, and Missouri Pacific 5s, ended ⅜ higher at 24¾ on turnover of $276,000.

Bank Excess Reserves Drop $100,000,000

By the Associated Press

The banks' lendable excess reserves dropped $100,000,000 last week to a total of $6,010,000,000—the lowest total in many months.

The decline was ascribed by the Federal Reserve Board to a combination of technical factors and followed a larger decline the previous week due to income tax payments.

Changes in member bank reserve balances and related items during the week and the year ended March 26, 1941, were reported as follows:

Listen! with Glynn

Hollywood is going to have one of its most terrific of Hollywood premieres tonight—but with the difference that instead of the meager few thousands who usully participate in same, millions, in fact everybody in the country, can be in on it.

It's the new C. B. S. radio show, called appropriately enough "Hollywood Premieres," and it's to be heard every Friday from now on over WJSV and other C. B. S. stations from 10 to 10:30 p. m.

It will be a preview each week of a big, new motion picture, specially adapted for radio. Louella Parsons, the well known movie columnist, will serve as mistress of ceremonies, introducing the stars to the listening audience, and devoting a portion of the program to nswering questions about the stars sent to her by fans.

The "Hollywood Premiere" tonight is "Flame of New Orleans," starring Marlene Dietrich and featuring Bruce Cabot, Roland Young, Mischa Auer, Andy Devine, Melville Cooper, Laura Hope Crews. It is supervised by Rene Clair, the famous French writer and director. The story is set in the crinoline and river steamboat days of old New Orleans, with Miss Dietrich playing the role of an international adventuress and getting into all sorts of romantical situations.

The Post Radio Highlights

TOMORROW IS RADIO'S MOVING DAY: Continuing their explanations of the frequency changes which will affect WRC, WOL, WINX and WJSV here, the broadcasters offer two more talks. 7:15, WRC and WMAL—Chairman James L. Fly, of the Federal Communications Commission. 10:30, WOL—E. H. Jett, chief engineer commissioner of the F. C. C.

2:30 p. m., WOL—Leopold Stokowski leads the Philadelphia Orchestra and the Westminster Choir in Bach's "St. Matthew Passion," which the same group will perform here at Constitution Hall Tuesday in Holy Week.

10, WJSV—The Post's Louella Parsons commences a new radio series, promising preview peeks at the newest films. Her opener is "Flame of New Orleans," with Marlene Dietrich and Bruce Cabot as the stars.

10, WMAL—Herbert Hoover addresses the seventy-fifth annual meeting of the New Haven Y. M. C. A.

1 a. m., WOL—An all-star "Greek Festival for Freedom," presaging the one which will be held in the Capitol Theater here tomorrow evening, is aired from the Radio City Music Hall. Raymond Massey, Bill Robinson, Monty Woolley, Carol Bruce, and "others."
